SCHNEIDER HAD TIRED OF HIS WIFE, IS CLAIM

Witness in Murder Trial Asserts That He Said He Would Get Rid of Her

DEFENSE'S ANSWER

Administrator of Estate of Deceased Woman's Father
Among Witnesses

The most direct evidence introduced thus far in the murder trial of Kasimir Schneider in district court was placed before the jury by the state in the testimony of Clara Fisher, yesterday afternoon. She told the jury that Schneider had asked her to be his housekeeper and live with him, and that in answer to a question as to what was the matter with his wife, he said that she was sick and would die, and that he would be glad to get rid of her. The defense vigorously challenged the credibility of the witness on cross-examination. Among other things demanding if she were not in jail for vagrancy in Bismarck during November and December, 1918, when she said she was in Minneapolis. She denied this, and defense counsel read from a sheriff's record to show she was in Bismarck. She also denied knowing Chief Martinson, who, defense attorneys claim, has arrested her.

Developments of the case thus far in the prosecution's chain of evidence including testimony of expert that sufficient poison was found in Mrs. Schneider's stomach to cause her death; the testimony of Joseph Schwan that Schneider had asked him about poisons before his wife's death, the statements of the Fisher girl, and testimony of Frank Zander that Schneider remarked on the morning after her death when exhibiting a glass filled with liquid that "if they find out about this liniment, maybe this liniment didn't do any good." Mrs. Joseph Schwan corroborated statements of her husband regarding Schneider's inquiries.

"Liniment" Tale

Frank Zander, who is administrator of the estate of Mr. Schutz, father of Mrs. Schneider, the deceased woman, was testimony of expert testimony and questioned by J. F. Sullivan, special prosecutor, engaged by him. He said he engaged a special prosecutor on solicitation of Mrs. Schneider's relatives. He said he had known Amelia Schneider for 23 years and that she had always been a healthy girl. He came to Bismarck on the day of the funeral, he said, and talked to Schneider and others. He said that it was the morning after his wife's death that Schneider handed him a glass, offering him a drink, and remarked that if they found out about the liniment, "maybe this liniment didn't do any good."

On cross-examination he denied that he had suggested employing a special prosecutor, but said he had taken it over with relatives. He said Schneider set up with them the night after his wife died.

Schwan on Again

Joseph Schwan, on the stand again, on cross-examination, said he was not sure whether or not he told Coroner Strokle that Schneider didn't have any lights, and did not remember that he said Schneider didn't treat his wife right. Questioned directly he said his wife told him Schneider kept his house dark, and answering question as to whether Schneider did treat his wife right he said "sometimes it looked to me not right." He told of an incident at his home.

RAIL MERGER HEARING MAR. 19

St. Paul, Mar. 5.—Hearings on the proposed consolidation of the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Burlington roads into one larger system will be held in St. Paul the week of March 19, according to plans. Word received here today from Washington first of a series of hearings to be arranged by the Interstate Commerce Commission in which the public will have an opportunity to participate in discussion of the plan to consolidate railroad systems of the country into a smaller number of large systems. Producers and others in Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, will participate in the St. Paul hearing, which is expected that other consolidations relating to the Northwest also will be presented for public consideration. This will include the Northwestern-Omaha-Union Pacific hearing and the placement of the St. Paul road and the range roads.

I. V. A. PLAN TO RAISE FUNDS IMMEDIATELY

To Perfect Organization Plans
Within 90 Days, Says
Chairman Nelson

Organization of the Independent Voters Association for the purpose of carrying on its work or meeting a recall of referendum campaign will be completed within 90 days, Theodore G. Nelson, chairman of the I. V. A. as reorganized here recently, said here before returning to Fargo.

The independent realize that it is a referendum or recall campaign is forced, it is up to them to carry the truth to the people once more, and they are preparing to do it," he said. "At the organization meeting held here a week ago plans were laid for the building of a state-wide organization that will be developed to full capacity in every precinct and legislative district, in the next ninety days."

"The temporary executive committee ordered the completing of the organization immediately and provided for the raising of $5,000 at once to cover the cost of building and maintaining the temporary organization. With this done, the independent will be in fine shape to jump into a battle royal at any time they were forced to. The money to be raised will not be consumed by debts of the old organization, because there are none. Notices of the portion of the temporary organization plan has been allotted to each legislative district will be mailed from state headquarters to the temporary committee members this week, understanding several hundred dollars to apply on this preliminary fund was raised here last week."

Mr. Nelson asserted that "those who are trying to foment a referendum and recall election campaign know that the Nestos administration has kept faith with the people and that so many members of the Nonpartisan league have lost confidence in Lemke and his lieutenants that there is no hope of their winning in either a referendum or a recall election. They merely want to fight so that they can raise another Lemke fund."

WILL INSPECT NEW COMPANY OF N. D. GUARD

A headquarters company of the second battalion, North Dakota National Guard, organized at Cannon, will receive state inspection Wednesday night by Major B. C. Boyd of Grand Forks, it was announced at the Adjutant-General's office. There are two officers and 45 men in the company.

Lieut. Col. Thomas Rogers, U. S. A., instructor of the Minnesota National Guard, yesterday began his tour of the state inspecting national guard units, and will be engaged on this work most of the month. Maj. Manville Sprague will accompany him, making the state inspection.

Capt. G. A. M. Anderson, U. S. A., instructor of North Dakota National Guard units, is at Williston and Minot this week for purposes of instruction and inspection.

Fires in Government Printing Office Do Much Damage

MANY PLEAS OF GUILTY IN FEDERAL COURT

Judge Miller Assesses Some Stiff Fines Against Vol-
stead Law Violators

JONES TRIAL HELD UP

Absence of Attorneys Cause
Case of Bismarck Man to Go Over a Day

Trial of C. B. Jones of Bismarck, former assistant cashier of the City National bank here, charged with embezzlement did not begin in federal court today when the March term opened with Judge Andrew Miller presiding. Continuance was asked by P. D. Norton, attorney for Jones, because Norton is engaged in a trial in district court, and George A. Bangs of Grand Forks, also attorney for Jones, is engaged in court at Fargo.

District Attorney M. A. Hildreth objected to continuance until next Monday, because many witnesses have come from a considerable distance, and the case may be ordered to trial within the next two days.

Judge Miller called the court calendar, consisting of 13 civil cases, and numerous criminal cases, did not find attorneys ready for trial today on any civil cases, and received many pleas of guilty in criminal cases.

Heavier fines were assessed on violators of liquor laws. Judge Miller said when he first held court here. At that time he notified numerous defendants from the Slope country that it should be understood that while their pleas for leniency because of unfamiliarity with the law were given weight, everyone in the western part of the state should understand that offenders would be dealt with severely in the future.

Some Stiff Fines

Fred Stricker, Stark county farmer, pleaded guilty and was fined $50. George F. McIntosh county was fined $100, Joe Snudera of Golden Valley county the same, and Earle Miller of McKenzie county was fined $500 on all violations of the Volstead act.

Attorney William Langer made a plea for Stricker, who, the district attorney said, had nine gallons of moonshine, and had other ingredients. Langer said Stricker was a farmer living near Lefor, and that he had read two years ago in a Black Hawk county paper a letter from Supreme Court Justice Robinson stating that any man had a right to make liquor for his own use. Langer said the man had nine children. Judge Miller refused to believe the liquor was for his own use.

"That's enough to give sleeping sickness to half the community," Judge Miller remarked. "Plea for continuance in the case of Allen H. White, former postmaster at Harrison, charged with embezzlement, was made, it being said by his attorney, William Langer, that he is ill with 'flu' in Minneapolis."

Mrs. Katherine Miller of Wagon, Burleigh county, pleaded not guilty to taking government property and retaining articles found in a mail sack on the road. She claimed she offered to pay for them. Mr. Faber was named her attorney.

B. F. Pleisk and Ernest A. Wieling, charged with participation in a postal fraud at Beach, pleaded not guilty. Thomas J. Smith, also alleged to be implicated in the fraud at Beach, was charged.

The case against Jaimie C. Logan, charged with getting merchandise fraudulently, was dismissed because of his youth, the district attorney said.

Richard A. Schutte of Napoleon, charged with making a false statement to take an examination to enter the postal service, was deferred until tomorrow for him to plead.

John Wiseman and Charles Root, charged with shipping liquor into Indian country, pleaded not guilty. Three other cases were dismissed, two against the same man, J. Howard Caldwell, formerly a government employee at the Standing Rock Indian Agency, the district attorney stating he believed the charges were the result of spite work.

The case against George Rannum of McLean county, growing out of whether he had authority to transfer a $100,000 bond in his case, was dismissed. The case against a woman, charged with violation of the Volstead act by having four gallons of (Continued on Page Three)

POLICE SEEK TO STAMP OUT TENDERLOIN

Chicago Chief of Police to Put Guard at Front and Back Doors

Chicago, Mar. 6.—Stamping out commercial vice under what was said to have been the most drastic police order ever drawn in Chicago may claim the entire attention of 3,000 of the city's available 4,575 patrolmen. Charles Fitzmorris, chief of police, last night directed Police Captains, to place uniformed patrolmen at the front and back doors of every known disorderly house in Chicago.

Chief Fitzmorris refused to comment on the order other than to say "it speaks for itself."

The chief's order came within four hours after Chief Justice McKinley of the criminal court had indicated the March grand jury would be required to renew the investigation into alleged vice conditions.

MAY CONTEST MINERAL TAX

Reported Railroads Will Fight
Out Act in Courts

Railroads owning large mineral reserves in North Dakota will test the validity of the act of the legislature placing a 3-cent an acre tax on coal, oil and similar reserves, according to information received by State Tax Commissioner C. C. Converse. The Northern Pacific road, in particular, owns large reserves, having disposed of railroad lands with the mineral rights reserved.

The 75 percent valuation law will be effective this year, Mr. Converse said, although assessors list property before the law be come effective on July 1. It is provided that the assessors shall list property at true cash value, and the county auditors shall deduct 25 percent after the statement of equalization meets, which will be in August, after the law effective. It was explained. The new tax exemption law also is effective this year.

MEMORIAL DAY EVENT WILL BE RUN AS USUAL

Indianapolis, Mar. 6.—The international 500-mile automobile race, the premier event of its kind in the world, will be held here Memorial Day as usual, as the result of Governor McCray vetoing an unconstitutional bill passed by both houses of the Indiana legislature which would prohibit the race. The action of the Governor, which came a few minutes before adjournment of the general assembly, ended one of the bitterest factional fights in that body in recent years. A last-minute attempt to pass the bill over the Governor's veto was made in the senate, but this failed by a 30 to 5 vote, and the measure died. The measure, which was sponsored by the state department of the American Legion and which resulted in a split in that organization, was intended, its supporters declared, was to prevent the commercialization of Memorial Day by holding sporting events at which an admission fee was charged.

OLSON'S PARTNER GOES ON TRIAL IN NEWBURGH

Newburgh, Indiana, Mar. 6.—John C. Effinger, former cashier of Newburgh banks, indicted with Jorgen Olson, Minot, N. D., and A. H. Halvorson, Olson's nephew, on charges of conspiracy to commit larceny and embezzlement in connection with the failure of the bank, went on trial here yesterday afternoon. Neither Olson nor Halvorson had been served with warrants.

GOVERNOR TO USE PRUNING KNIFE AGAIN

More Slashes from Appropriation Bills Are Expected To Be Made

IS MAKING A SURVEY

Children's Code and Educational Investigation Measures Are Signed

Governor R. A. Nestos is going to use the pruning knife again. Veto of appropriation Saturday were but a starter. The Governor has announced his intention of reducing appropriations wherever it seems possible, and it is generally expected here that before he is finished there may be a quarter of a million dollars more cut from the appropriations of the 18th legislative assembly.

Some appropriations may escape the axe only because the law provides that the Governor can not scale down items, but must either approve or veto one item in its entirety. It is known that the Governor believes it would be possible to reduce some items but he is unable to do it.

A careful survey is being made of all appropriations, and the Governor also is seeking more detailed information before acting on some bills, which must be acted upon within 15 days from their passage.

Idea On Bridge

The underlying idea of the Governor in acting upon appropriation bills is understood to be in accord with his previously announced position that while nothing should be done to cripple necessary institutions and departments, every economy possible should be exercised in the next two years. This is the reason for the veto of the Williston bridge appropriation. This appropriation, which it was anticipated because of statements made in the legislature, would have to be increased by subsequent legislatures, and the cost of the bridge eventually be perhaps as much as $20 for each man, woman and child in McKenzie county. The Governor has stated that two years from now, if there are good crops and times are more prosperous, that such an appropriation may not be objectionable, but felt it would be an unwise burden upon the people of the county at this time.

The veto of the appropriation for the Bottineau Normal school was both on the ground that the school was to be a school of forestry and this purpose had been subverted, and in line with recommendations of the Nonpartisan board of administration two years ago and educational experts that duplication in educational institutions was both expensive and unwise.

Code Bills Signed

Among the bills signed yesterday were four of the Children's Code Commission bills, including the new mothers' pension bill, and his affecting orphan children and making more severe penalties for wife and child desertion.

The Trubshaw resolution calling for a non-paid educational commission to investigate the increased cost of education and report to the next legislature also was signed, as were the measure repealing the "cow bill," bringing election laws, the Wallace, former state tax commissioner, now living in New York, placed at $6,220 instead of $5,820 the judgment being correct in this respect.

Judge Pugh found that the figure originally given Mr. Wallace by Supt. Baker of the state Home Building Association, was $4,750 for a standard plan house, including a $500 lot. The price given for the construction of a sun parlor and garage was $50 additional. The changes and extras were ascertained to be $520, making a total of $6,220.

The figure is less than that claimed by the state, which was over $11,000, and higher than the figure urged by Mr. Wallace's attorneys, who stood on the original valuation of the property.

Whether the case will go to the supreme court again is to be determined later.

All cases involving the price of homes built by the Home Building Association will be tried, Attorney-General George Shafer said regardless of the passage of a bill by the legislature winding up the Home Building Association and providing a method of arbitration in squabbles over the price of homes. The law does not become effective until July 1.

Six Army Planes at Montgomery En Route to Indies

Montgomery, Ala., Mar. 6.—Final inspection of the six DeHavilland army airplanes en route to the West Indies was announced for today, just preceding their hop-off for Jacksonville, Fla., on the third leg of the journey which began at San Antonio last Friday.

The fliers arriving in Montgomery Sunday afternoon had to remain here until today for repairs to their machines.

The routing from Montgomery by way of Arcadia, Fla., was abandoned on account of the bad stretch of thickly wooded section endangering the results of any forced landings.

Chicago, Mar. 6.—George McKenna, 28, formerly of Milwaukee, Wis., and Jerome, his brother, and five other men were arrested here early today by police in connection with the theft of about $50,000 in jewels from a downtown jewelry store. Louis Shilief, arrested yesterday afternoon immediately after the robbery, also is in jail. He was captured by shoppers who, attracted by the cries of Mrs. Beatrice Mansover, owner of the shop, pursued him. A companion escaped.

Jerome McKenna was arrested first by police. Later two men who gave their names as Sam Sherman and Jack Davis were arrested at the former's apartment.

George McKenna was arrested there early today and police said they found rings valued at $20,000 in his possession. Arrest of other robbers preceded that of George. From revelations made by those under arrest police said they expected to recover the rest of the precious stones today.

HOME PRICE IS INCREASED

Judge Pugh Substantially
Affirms Home Building
Case Findings

Judge Thomas Pugh of Dickinson, deciding the Wallace-Home Building Association case upon the taking of additional testimony as directed by the supreme court, substantially reaffirms his former decision.

The contract price of the Bismarck house built for George Wallace, former state tax commissioner, now living in New York, placed at $6,220 instead of $5,820 the judgment being correct in this respect.

Judge Pugh found that the figure originally given Mr. Wallace by Supt. Baker of the state Home Building Association, was $4,750 for a standard plan house, including a $500 lot. The price given for the construction of a sun parlor and garage was $50 additional. The changes and extras were ascertained to be $520, making a total of $6,220.

Thorpe Assits Prosecutor in Court Trial

Assistant Attorney General George Thorpe will assist state attorney John Sad of Griggs county in the trial of George Jacobson, president of the Farmers State Bank of Valm, scheduled to start today at Valley City.

Mr. Jacobson is being charged with embezzlement, it being alleged that he fraudulently obtained about $3,000 by embezzling proceeds of mortgaged notes placed in his possession for sale, the proceeds of which were to be used in payment of other mortgage notes.

Attorney General George Shafer was at Fargo today to represent the state in arguments on motion to quash some of the indictments returned in the Scandinavian American bank grand jury investigation.

VALIDITY OF INDICTMENTS ARE ASSAILED

Defendants in Scandinavian Bank Scandal Fight Grand Jury Bills

BEFORE JUDGE McKENNA

First Move Is to Quash
Charges Containing Thirty-Three Counts

Fargo, Mar. 6.—The validity of indictments returned last May in Cass county district court against 11 defendants in connection with the failure of the Scandinavian-American Bank of this city was attacked today when the first of the cases brought against H. J. Hagen of Seattle came up before Judge George McKenna of Napoleon, called in to hear the case.

The first move made by the defense was to quash the indictments containing 33 counts against Hagen on the ground that there were irregularities in the proceedings of the grand jury investigation.

Argument on the motion to quash the indictment probably will take up the court's attention until Saturday.

Prior to the motion, George A. Bangs of Grand Forks, special assistant attorney general, raised the question of the court's jurisdiction to hear Hagen county cases in Cass county, but this question was settled when the court asked the parties to stipulate for jurisdiction, inasmuch as he had been called to Fargo to hear the cases.

Hagen and William Lemke were the only defendants in the courtroom. C. C. Townley, F. W. Cathers, P. McAnaney, A. H. Padlock, O. Lofthus and P. V. Sherman, co-defendants, are out of the city.

MANY PLEAS OF GUILTY IN FEDERAL COURT

Judge Miller Assesses Some Stiff Fines Against Volstead Law Violators

JONES TRIAL HELD UP

Absence of Attorneys Cause Case of Bismarck Man to Go Over a Day

Trial of C. R. Jones of Bismarck, former assistant cashier of the City National bank here, charged with embezzlement did not begin in federal court today when the March term opened with Judge Andrew Miller presiding. Continuance was asked by P. D. Norton, attorney for Jones, because Norton is engaged in a trial in district court, and George A. Bangs of Grand Forks, also attorney for Jones, is engaged in court at Fargo.

District Attorney M. A. Hildreth objected to continuance until next Monday, because many witnesses have come from a considerable distance, and the case may be ordered to trial within the next two days. Judge Miller called the court calendar, consisting of 13 civil cases and numerous criminal cases, did not find attorneys ready for trial today on any civil cases, and received many pleas of guilty in criminal cases.

Heavier fines were assessed on pleas of guilty in liquor cases by Judge Miller than when he first held court here. At that time he assessed numerous defendants from the Slope country that it should be understood that while their pleas for leniency because of unfamiliarity with the law were given weight, everyone in the western part of the state should understand that leniency would be dealt with severely in the future.

Some Stiff Fines.
Fred Stricker, Stark county farmer, pleaded guilty and was fined $50. George Fix of McIntosh county was fined $100. Joe Snudera of Golden Valley county the same, and Earl Miller of McIntosh county, fined $300, all on violations of the Volstead act.

Attorney William Langer made a plea for Stricker, who, the district attorney said, had nine gallons of moonshine on hand and other ingredients. Langer said Stricker was a farmer living near Lefor, and that he had read two years ago in a Bismarck German paper a letter from Supreme Court Judge Robinson stating that any man had a right to make liquor for his own use. Langer said Stricker had no children. Judge Miller refused to believe the liquor was for his own use. "That's enough to give sleeping sickness to half the community," Judge Miller remarked.

Plea for continuance in the case of Allen White, former postmaster at Harmon, charged with embezzlement, was made, it being said by his attorney, William Langer, that he is ill with "flu" in Minneapolis.

Mrs. Katherine Miller of Wink, Burleigh county, pleaded not guilty to taking government property and retaining articles found in a mail sack on the road. She claimed she offered to pay for them. Mr. Faber was named her attorney.

B. F. Piesik and Ernest A. Wieting, charged with participation in a postal robbery at Beach, pleaded not guilty. Thomas J. Smith, also alleged to be implicated, is still in jail in Beach, it was charged.

Case Dismissed

The case against Jalmer C. Logan, charged with getting merchandise fraudulently, was dismissed because of his youth, the district attorney said.

Richard A. Schuette of Napoleon, charged with making a false statement to take an examination to enter the postal service, was deferred until tomorrow for him to plead.

John Wiseman and Charles Root, charged with shipping liquor into Indian country, pleaded not guilty. Three other cases were dismissed, two against the same man, J. Howard Caldwell, formerly a government employee at the Standing Rock Indian Agency, the district attorney stating he believed the charges were the result of spite work.

The case against George Ranum of McLean county, growing out of whether he had priority to transfer a $100 bond in his case, was dismissed. Theo. Brenner of Linton, charged with violation of the Volstead act by having four gallons of

TESTIMONY IN KU KLUX CASE READY FOR JURY

Bastrop, La., Mar. 6.—With the organization of the Morehouse grand jury completed yesterday, Attorney General A. V. Cox was expected to appear before that body today to begin the presentation of testimony obtained at the state's open hearing here last January in connection with the kidnapping and other activities of masked bands, which he state charges culminated in the death of Watt Daniel and T. E. Richard of Mer Rouge last August. The Attorney-General has charged that these hooded bands were composed of members of the Ku Klux Klan.

POLICE SEEK TO STAMP OUT TENDERLOIN

Chicago Chief of Police to Put Guard at Front and Back Doors

Chicago, Mar. 6.—Stamping out commercial vice under what was said to have been the most drastic police order ever drawn in Chicago may claim the entire attention of 3,000 of the city's available 4,575 patrolmen. Charles Fitzmorris, chief of police, last night directed Police Captains to place uniformed patrolmen at the front and back doors of every known disorderly house in Chicago.

Chief Fitzmorris refused to comment on the order other than to say "it speaks for itself."

The chief's order came within four hours after Chief Justice McKinley of the criminal court had indicated the March grand jury would be required to renew the investigation into alleged vice conditions.

MAY CONTEST MINERAL TAX

Reported Railroads Will Fight Out Act in Courts

Railroads owning large mineral reserves in North Dakota will test the validity of the act of the legislature placing a 3-cent tax on every acre of land containing oil and gas reserves, according to information received by State Tax Commissioner C. C. Converse. The Northern Pacific road, in particular, owns large reserves, having disposed of railroad lands with the mineral rights reserved.

The 75 percent valuation law will be effective this year, Mr. Converse said, although assessors list property before the law becomes effective on July 1. It is provided that the assessors shall list property at 75 percent of cash value, and the county auditors shall deduct 25 percent after the state board of equalization meets, which will be in August, it was explained. The new tax exemption law also is effective this year.

MEMORIAL DAY EVENT WILL BE RUN AS USUAL

Indianapolis, Mar. 6.—The international 500-mile automobile race, the premier event of its kind in the world, will be held here Memorial Day as usual, as the result of Governor McCray vetoing as unconstitutional a bill passed by both houses of the Indiana legislature which would prohibit the race. The action of the Governor, which came a few minutes before adjournment of the general assembly, ended one of the bitterest factional fights in that body in recent years. A last-minute attempt to pass the bill over the Governor's veto was made in the senate, but this failed by a 30 to vote, and the measure died. The measure, which was sponsored by the state department of the American Legion and which resulted in a split in that organization, was intended, its supporters declared, was to prevent the commercialization of Memorial Day by holding sporting events at which an admission fee was charged.

OLSON'S PARTNER GOES ON TRIAL IN NEWBURGH

Newburgh, Indiana, Mar. 6.—John C. Effinger, former cashier of Newburgh banks, indicted with J. H. Olson, Minot, N. D., and A. H. Halvorson, Olson's nephew, on charges of conspiracy to commit larceny and embezzlement in connection with the failure of the bank, went on trial here yesterday afternoon. Neither Olson nor Halvorson had been served with warrants.

GOVERNOR TO USE PRUNING KNIFE AGAIN

More Slashes from Appropriation Bills Are Expected To Be Made

IS MAKING A SURVEY

Children's Code and Educational Investigation Measures Are Signed

Governor R. A. Nestos is going to use the pruning knife again. Veto of appropriation Saturday were but a starter. The Governor has announced his intention of reducing appropriations wherever it seems possible, and it is generally expected here that before he is finished there may be a quarter of a million dollars more cut from the appropriations of the 18th legislative assembly.

Some appropriations may escape the axe only because the law provides that the Governor can not scale down items, but must either approve or veto one item in its entirety. It is known that the Governor believes it would be possible to reduce some items but he is unable to do it.

A careful survey is being made of all appropriations, and the Governor also is seeking more detailed information before acting on some bills, which must be acted upon within 15 days from their passage.

Idea On Bridge

The underlying idea of the Governor in acting upon appropriation bills is understood to be in accord with his previously announced position that while nothing should be done to cripple necessary institutions and departments, every economy possible should be exercised in the next two years. This is the reason for the veto of the Williston bridge appropriation. This appropriation, which was anticipated because of statements made in the legislature, would have to be increased by subsequent legislatures and the cost of the bridge eventually be perhaps as much as $20 for each man, woman and child in McKenzie county. The Governor has stated that two years from now, if there are good crops and times are more prosperous, that such an appropriation may not be objectionable, but felt it would be an unwise burden for all the people of the county at this time.

The veto of the appropriation for the Battineau Normal school, both on the ground that the school was to be a school of forestry and this purpose had been subverted, and in line with recommendations of the Nonpartisan board of administration two years ago and educational institutions were both expensive and unwise.

Code Bills Signed

Among the bills signed yesterday were four of the Children's Code Commission bills, including the new mothers' pension bill, and bills affecting orphan children and making more severe penalties for wife and child desertion.

The Trubshaw resolution calling for a non-paid educational commission to investigate the increased cost of education and report to the next legislature also was signed, as were the measure repealing the "cow bill," bringing election laws, the bill making it unlawful to hold public dances on Sunday, and the bill abolishing the board of experts. W. E. Parsons, who was chief clerk of the senate, and A. D. McKinnon, assistant chief clerk, today were working on the corrections for the permanent journal, while H. L. Holden and J. P. Tucker were doing the same on the house journal.

'HUMAN FLY' FALLS FROM BUILDING, KILLED INSTANTLY

New York, Mar. 6.—Not more than $100.00 and according to one story only $50, was the fee Harry Y. Young, a "human fly," contracted to receive for the effort which yesterday resulted in his spectacular death when he fell from three floors up the hotel Martineau to the pavement and died. The money was not paid in advance.

Newspaper photographers and reporters in the big throng who saw the man fall to his death in the noon rush hour in one of the most congested districts in the world said today that all the "human flies" they have seen work Young worked the fastest.

Though the walls were slippery because of the moisture-laden air Young was creeping briskly up the wall at a pace faster than a hoodlums going up a ladder. Young had nothing but three inches of space into which he stuck his toes and fingers. Comments of observers bore out reports that he felt something was going to happen to him before he started.

Young apparently jumped at the chance to risk his life for a small sum and for his young widow, a 20-year-old bride of a few months, whose home was at Wilkesbarre, Pa. When seen she said he had not worked all winter. So much did he need money that he was "perfecting an unheard of stunt, upside down, tight-rope walking," she said. He planned to introduce it over Niagara Falls.

HUNT "DEAD" MAN

Police of New Haven, Conn., faced an unusual mystery when they began search for De LaFayette Flint, school principal, reported dead in New York hospital. Hospital failed to verify report but no trace of Flint could be found.

$50,000 THEFT THWARTED IN CHICAGO STORE

Shoppers Join Owner of Store in Pursuit of Bandits

Chicago, Mar. 6.—George McKenna, 28, formerly of Milwaukee, Wis., and Jerome, his brother, and five other men were arrested here early today by police in connection with the theft of about $50,000 in jewels from a downtown jewelry store. Louis Shilf, arrested yesterday afternoon immediately after the robbery, also is in jail. He was captured by shoppers who, attracted by the cries of Mrs. Beatrice Massover, owner of the shop, pursued him. A companion escaped.

Jerome McKenna was arrested first by police. Later two men who gave their names as Sam Sherman and Jack Davis were arrested at the former's apartment.

George McKenna was arrested early today and police said they found rings valued at $20,000 in his possession. Arrest of other robbers preceded that of George. From revelations made by those under arrest police said they expected to recover the rest of the precious stones today.

HOME PRICE IS INCREASED

Judge Pugh Substantially Affirms Home Building Case Findings

Judge Thomas Pugh of Dickinson, deciding the Wallace-Home Building Association case upon the taking of additional testimony as directed by the supreme court, substantially reaffirms his former decision.

The contract price of the Bismarck house built for George Wallace, former state tax commissioner, now living in New York, is placed at $6,220 instead of $5,820. The judgment being correct in this respect.

Judge Pugh found that the figure originally given Mr. Wallace by Supt. Baker of the state Home Building Association, was $4,750 for a standard plan house, including a $500 lot. The price given for the construction of a sun parlor and garage was $50 additional. The changes and extras were ascertained to be $520, making a total of $6,220.

The figure is less than that claimed by the state, which was over $11,000, and higher than the figure urged by Mr. Wallace's attorneys, who stood on the original verbal estimate.

Whether the case will go to the supreme court again is to be determined later.

All cases involving the price of homes built by the Home Building Association will be tried, Attorney-General George Shafer said, regardless of the passage of a by the legislature winding up the Home Building Association and providing a method of arbitration in squabbles over the price of homes. The law does not become effective until July 1.

VALIDITY OF INDICTMENTS ARE ASSAILED

Defendants in Scandinavian Bank Scandal Fight Grand Jury Bills

BEFORE JUDGE McKENNA

First Move Is to Quash Charges Containing Thirty-Three Counts

Fargo, Mar. 6.—The validity of indictments returned last May in Cass county district court against 11 defendants in connection with the failure of the Scandinavian-American Bank of this city was attacked today when the first of the cases brought against H. J. Hagen of Seattle came up before Judge George McKenna of Napoleon, called in to hear the case.

The first move made by the defense was to quash the indictments containing 33 counts against Hagen on the ground that there were irregularities in the proceedings of the grand jury investigation.

Argument on the motion to quash the indictment probably will take up the court's attention until Saturday.

Prior to the motion, George A. Bangs of Grand Forks, special assistant attorney general, raised the question of the court's jurisdiction to hear Ransom county cases in Cass county, but this question was settled when the court asked the parties to stipulate for jurisdiction, inasmuch as he had been called to Fargo to hear the cases.

Hagen and William Lemke were the only defendants in the court room. C. C. Towley, F. W. Cuthbert, L. P. McAneney, A. H. Padlock, O. D. Loftus and P. V. Sherman, co-defendants, are out of the city.

GOLF IS CHIEF ISSUE BEFORE HARDING PARTY

On Board President Harding's Train, near Savannah, Ga., Mar. 6.—The vision of rest and freedom from wearing official duties which President Harding has had for months today became real.

The chief executive, with Mrs. Harding and more than a half-dozen friends awoke this morning near the border of Florida, where for a month he will endeavor to find relaxation after a year of steady attention to international and domestic problems of the nation.

Evil days of the President were looking forward eagerly to a vacation have been apparent to those of his party ever since his departure yesterday at noon from Washington. As the special drew near Ormond, the first stopping place of the trip, his countenance grew more cheerful.

Preparations for making the most of the vacation began early today. Golf clubs were brought forward and the conversation turned to the relative merits of the golf courses of a dozen or so Florida East Coast resorts. Where the Presidential party will stop.

ARRIVES AT ST. AUGUSTINE

St. Augustine, Fla., Mar. 6.—The Presidential special conveying Mr. and Mrs. Harding and party to Ormond stopped here at 10 o'clock today to leave. Secretary and Mrs. Weeks in the city, and to allow Charles G. Dawes to board the train. Mrs. Harding appeared on the rear platform for the first time during the trip and was greeted by genuine Florida sunshine and the genial humor of Ex-Senator Chauncey Depew. Secretary and Mrs. Weeks will remain in the city until the return of the Presidential party to St. Augustine on March 18 to 20.

Thorpe Assits Prosecutor in Court Trial

Assistant Attorney General George Thorpe will assist states attorney John Sad of Griggs county in the trial of George Jacobson, president of the Farmers State Bank of Walum, scheduled to start today at Valley City.

Mr. Jacobson is charged with embezzlement, it being alleged that he fraudulently obtained about $3,000 by embezzling the proceeds of mortgages placed in his possession for sale, the proceeds of which were to be used in payment of other mortgages notes.

Attorney General George Shafer was at Fargo today to represent the state in arguments on motions to quash some of the indictments returned in the Scandinavian-American bank grand jury investigation.

RECREATION HELD FOE OF DELINQUENCY

Social Worker for County and
City Details Work Done in
The Past Year

NEED PLAY GROUNDS

Well supervised recreational facilities are urged by Miss Elsie H. Lawrence, social worker for the Red Cross, Burleigh county and the city of Bismarck, as a means of reducing juvenile delinquency. In a report covering more than a year's period, Miss Lawrence detailed to the city commission the work of the social worker during the time and conclusions drawn from experience.

Describing the work of the Red Cross in connection with soldier aid cases she says:

"During the year of 1922 and 1923, from Feb. 15 to March 1, there were 318 social cases passed through the Red Cross office, 118 of which are still active. This work included problems of the widows deserting husbands and shiftless men, as well as the work with transients and dependent, neglected and delinquent children. The soldier cases were transferred from the box folders to a direct filing system and in this way it was found that over 700 cases have been cared for by the Burleigh county American Red Cross. At the present time 98 cases are active. Mandan has discontinued its soldier work, and is paying the Bismarck office $10 per month for looking after a dozen active cases. Since the Veterans Bureau reports that there are 60 men needing assistance in filing their claims, in Morton county, we hope to increase the number of active claims, as the compensation will be commensurate with the amount of work done."

"Although it is a general opinion that the war work is done, the claims which have been successfully prosecuted by this office show that we still have a big work in caring for our disabled men," the report continues.

The claims adjusted during the year showed 10 compensation claims, averaging from $100 to $500; eight active T. B. cases obtained hospitalization and back compensation; 11 men assisted in securing vocational training, seven are receiving treatment without compensation for disabilities which they received in service; eight men have secured dental treatment through the local office. A total of 48 claims were adjusted. Work continues on 98 claims.

Quoting from a letter from a soldier the report says "I wish here to again commend the splendid work of Mrs. E. L. Conklin, who has donated her entire time to the soldier work."

There are 40 widows in Burleigh county receiving Mothers' Pensions, the average of which is $35 per month.

It should like to recommend a close supervision of the expenditures of these pensions to ascertain if the mothers are buying sufficient food and the children getting proper nourishment," says Miss Lawrence. "Standard budgets should be worked out with the mothers and help given in their homes so that they may become efficient housekeepers."

City relief is given to 19 families, the report continues, most of whom are men and women who are too old or incapacitated for work. The poor relief for the year Sept. 1, 1921 to Sept. 1, 1922, averaged $535.49 monthly, while from Sept. 1, 1922 to Jan. 1, 1923, the average was $394.45. This included the greater part of the period when the most relief is needed, since coal is supplied after September 1.

During the past year the social worker interviewed and advised 103 dependent delinquents, or defective children, which the report lists as follows: Unmarried mothers, 13; delinquent girls, 30; dependent children, 42; girls returned home, 8; crippled children, 6; feeble-minded, 9 (only one admitted to Grafton institution, nutes 4, blind 1. Three of the unmarried mothers were sent to the Florence Crittenton home, two were married and two are receiving support for their babies.

"I believe that the only way that we can prevent delinquency is to hope to have adequate recreational facilities for young people and hope that during the coming summer playgrounds will be maintained with adequate supervision," says Miss Lawrence. "Jane Addams says a playground without supervision is the workshop of the devil, so we would not recommend playgrounds unless they could be under the supervision of recreational director. The sum-

DECISION OF SUPREME COURT From Grand Forks County

Jesse French and Sons Piano Company, a corporation, plaintiff and respondent, vs. Geo. W. Getts, sometimes doing business under the name and style of Geo. E. Getts Piano Company, Defendant and Appellant.

Syllabus: (1). Where a motion is made by the defendant to vacate a judgment upon the ground of excusable neglect, and where at the time the judgment was entered, an answer, verified by the attorney for the defendant on information and belief, was on file, and the same was at issue, and such answer disclosed a defense on the merits, it is held that no affidavit of merits is necessary, following Harris vs. Hess, 32 N. D. 25; 155 N. M. 41; and Peterson v. Finnegan, 45 N. D. 101; 176 N. 734.

(2) The action of the trial court in refusing to grant a motion to vacate a judgment under Section 7483 C. L. 1913 will not be reversed by this court except for manifest abuse of discretion. For reasons stated in the opinion, it is held that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to grant the motion of the defendant to vacate the judgment entered against him. Englebert, J.

Affirmed. Opinion of the Court by Johnson, J.
H. A. Libby, Grand Forks, North Dakota, Attorney for the Defendant and Appellant.

MASTER WILL DECIDE WATER COMPANY RATE

Judge Booth's Memorandum
Decision in Case Received
in Bismarck

ISSUES INJUNCTION

The next step in the case of the Bismarck Water Supply Company against Railroad Commission involving rates of the company is expected to be the appointment of a master by the federal court to take testimony on the matter of whether or not the rates laid down by the railroad commission are confiscatory. This was the rule filed in a Minot utility case in which similar action was taken.

The case of the local company first went before the federal court in August, 1922, on application by the water company for an injunction to restrain the railroad commission from enforcing the ten-existing rates. The court, composed of three judges granted an interlocutory injunction upon conditions, one of which was that "pending the final hearing plaintiff should not charge rates higher than 35 percent in excess of then-existing rates. Another condition was that the injunction should not interfere with the investigation then being carried on by the railroad commission with a view of establishing just and reasonable rates."

Since that time, the memorandum of Judge Wilbur Booth of federal court, St. Paul, says, the railroad commission has prescribed a 16-23 percent increase instead of the 35 percent increase. Based upon a supplemental bill, and affidavits, the plaintiff asked for a restraining order against the enforcement of the new rates.

Doubts Premise

Judge Booth's memorandum continues: "The presumption is that the new rates prescribed are just and reasonable, and I should be loath to interfere by restraining order with the rates thus prescribed until after a final hearing of the case, if the showing made on this application consisted simply in comparing conflicting evidence as to values and drawing conclusions therefrom."

"But a somewhat careful perusal of the record that has been introduced at this hearing has raised in my mind grave doubts whether the conclusions of the Commission, on which the new rates were based, were not reached either by assuming wrong premises, or by erroneous reasoning, or both; and also whether a materially different result would not have been reached if these errors had been avoided."

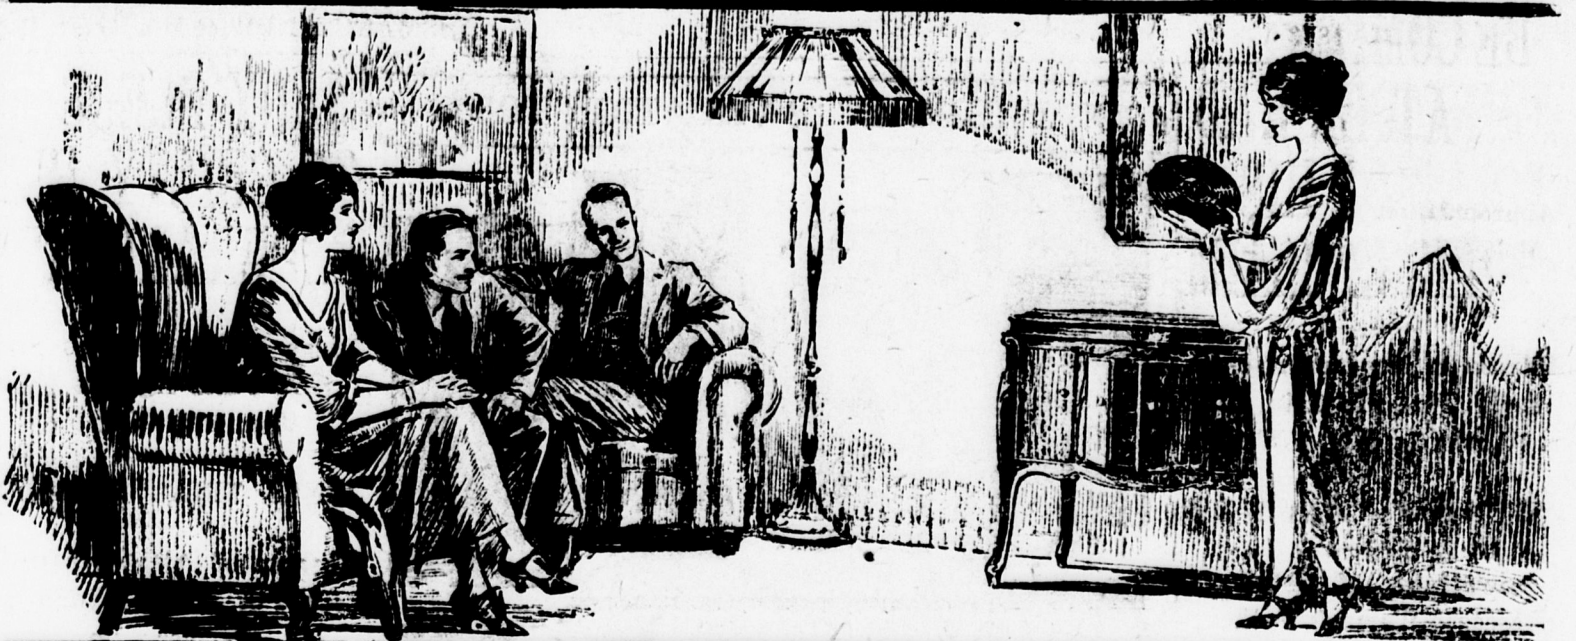

"Of course it is not possible from this preliminary hearing to state positively these conclusions, but they appear more than probable from the consideration I have been able to give the matter. To be more specific, in the case of the City of Minneapolis vs. Rand, Receiver, decided by the Circuit Court of Appeals of this circuit in January 1923, a number of the same questions involved in the case at bar were discussed and determined. One was that the matter of 'going value' could not properly be disregarded in making up a rate-base for a public utility, even though the past financial history of the utility company showed large earnings and in excess of what, under state supervision, would be considered by the Commission, apparently on the ground disapproved by the Court in the case just cited.

Must Consider Prices
"Again, in the same case, the court decided that the present-day prices, though caused by the war, not only should be considered in making the valuation of a utility company's property, but that, to

Completion of the beautiful Liberty Memorial building on the state capitol grounds here will be possible this year as a result of the bill appropriating $130,000 for completion of the building. The building will house the supreme court, adjutant general's office, state historical society and museum and will relieve congested conditions at the capitol. The total cost of the building, when completed, will be about $500,000. No provision had been made for this work by the appropriations committee of which Rep. Watt, Cass county, was chairman, and Rep. Harrington introduced a special bill covering it.

While the appropriation for beautifying the capitol grounds was disappointing, yet the Board of Administration will be able to do considerable work in restoring the grounds and trees there. The appropriations for the state departments generally are larger than before, extra help being provided in some of them. The only office lost to Bismarck through legislative action was the transferring of the administration of farmers institutes from the commission of agriculture and labor's office to the Agricultural College.

Of special interest to Bismarck in the final action, just before the legislative adjourn, on the bill to create a real estate health department. The bill have a rocky road but emerged with an appropriation of $18,200 for two years, a provision that offices shall be maintained in Bismarck, the office now being at Grand Forks and providing for a state health officer at a salary of $3,600 a year. While the appropriation was not as much as was desired by health workers, it is felt that the bill provides the framework for a real department for the first time, according to Rep. Anderson, Burleigh county, who supported the bill.

To Helena.

Burleigh county and other western counties will find gratification in the result of the fight to insert an item in the appropriation department appropriation to permit the department to co-operate with the North Dakota Lignite Coal Operators association in the development of the lignite coal industry. A bill creating a coal commission without pay to study the situation and report to the next legislature was defeated by opposition from eastern counties, and the appropriation for Dean Babcock's experiments with lignite briquetting at Hebron was cut from $10,000 to $5,000 for two years. The Mandan fair came through in good shape with a $6,000 appropriation for two years, and the representatives of Morton county were satisfied, although the appropriation was a decrease from the $10,000 appropriation of two years ago. Provision was made for much new building at the state training school at Mandan.

Rep. Anderson of Burleigh county led the fight for an increased wolf bounty, regarded as of much importance in the development of the sheep and turkey raising industry in western North Dakota.

Rep. Heaton's bill, house bill No. 4, was the first to pass the house and be signed by the governor, it correcting a condition with reference to railroad equipment sales.

A. of C. is Busy.

Senator Sperry, Burleigh county, teamed with the representatives, bills affecting the county being watched in both houses. Senator Sperry introduced with Senator McCoy and anti-Klu Klux Klan bill and the mine inspection act which resulted in revision of the mine inspection laws.

Early in the session the A. of C. named a legislative committee, which was in close touch with various committees and co-operating with the Burleigh county delegation.

TALKS TO MOTHERS OF FLAPPERS By Congresswoman Huck No. 2—What Will Keep Girls From "Petting"

BY MRS. WINNIFRED M. HUCK,
Congresswoman-at-Large From Illinois

Copyright, 1923, NEA Service, Inc. "Youth must be served," and because today's flappers and flapperism are today's capricious somersaults, there is no need to set up such a hue and cry as is raised about the morals of our boys and girls.

I sincerely believe that the children of this generation are an improvement on all the generations which preceded them.

Pass by the plights of those who would lead us to believe that our children are the victims of excesses finding outlet in such affairs as petting parties.

They do not speak from experience, but from imagination. No girl will "pet" if her mother enjoys her full confidence. Nor will a boy.

I am the mother of four adolescent children. Mine is a normal American home.

None of my children is going wrong. And if mine is a normal home, there are millions of others like it, wherein the same sane, wholesome and safeguarded conditions obtain.

Were I to believe for a second that ALL high school girls are not as they would care to have their mothers know them, I should not want to continue as a representative of the people in Congress, or share my lot as a cog in the great human machine.

Your children will be just what you teach them to be.

No girl or boy brought up in a home where mutual love and faith are keystones in the family arch, will stray far from the paths of honesty and righteousness.

Merely because some few isolated examples of youthful indiscretion are exploited by sensationalists, do not entertain the notion that the youth of our country is going to destruction.

Bad is always found with good, but the tendency of any nation where the mothers are good, is to have a dominant majority of good citizens.

The paramount tendency of this age, I think, has been to make its youth truthful. Things are done now in the open.

If a boy wants to pay attention to a girl he does so and tells his parents. Candor, if encouraged, opens the door for correction.

Do not gain the impression that I am tolerant and inert. Such is not so. I am especially keen on matters that come into the motives that actuate youth. Those motives are not bad.

A little advice, much education and more love will assure the moral integrity of our children. These must come from the parents.

To Helena.

"Did he ever take his wife any place," he was asked.

"No, sir, not as far as I can see," he replied.

Nels Anderson, of Carrington, Schneider's former section boss, said Schneider had talked about his wife to him once or twice, saying shortly after they were married that he was pleased with her, and later, along in March, said that his wife was sickly and he didn't think she would get over it.

He claimed Schneider told him he had taken his wife to a doctor and the doctor said she was incurable and if "was, no use to spend any more money on her." He also said Schneider remarked that he'd lose his second wife the same as he did his first.

OLD COW MAN OF N. D. DIES

Dickinson, N. D., March 6.—Word has been received in this city of the death of C. E. Higgins at Logan, N. Mex., on February 27. Mr. Higgins was well known to all the old time cattlemen of this section, having been associated in this line with such prominent early ranchers as A. N. Jeffries, George M. Pease and W. L. Richards. It was while engaged in cowpunching out in the country south that he was in some manner thrown from his horse and severely injured, lying out on the open prairie for 36 hours before help reached him. Mr. Higgins never fully recovered from this experience as creeping paralysis set in, and he was obliged to give up his active cowboy life.

The family took up their residence in this city, residing on First Avenue West, in the house which is now occupied by Prof. C. Roy Williams and family. Mr. and Mrs. Higgins and their two daughters left Dickinson for the west about 14 years ago. It is understood that for the past couple of years or so Mr. Higgins had been making his home with a sister at Logan, where he passed away. Interment was to take place at Altus, Okla.

Mr. Higgins was a member of the local Masonic order.

MEMORIAL TO BE COMPLETED AT CAPITOL

Appropriation of $130,000
Makes Possible Completion of Big Building

PROVIDES OFFICES

Association of Commerce and Burleigh County Delegation
Cooperated

Completion of the beautiful Liberty Memorial building on the state capitol grounds here will be possible this year as a result of the bill appropriating $130,000 for completion of the building. The building will house the supreme court, adjutant general's office, state historical society and museum and will relieve congested conditions at the capitol. The total cost of the building, when completed, will be about $500,000. No provision had been made for this work by the appropriations committee of which Rep. Watt, Cass county, was chairman, and Rep. Harrington introduced a special bill covering it.

While the appropriation for beautifying the capitol grounds was appropriating, yet the Board of Administration will be able to do considerable work in restoring the grounds and trees there. The appropriations for the state departments generally are larger than before, extra help being provided in some of them. The only office here in Bismarck through legislative action is the transferring of the administration of farmers institutes from the Commissioner of Agriculture and Labor's office to the Agricultural College.

Of special interest to Bismarck is the final action just before the legislative adjourn, on the bill to create a real estate health department. The bill has a rocky road but emerged with an appropriation of $18,200 for two years, a provision that offices shall be maintained in Bismarck, the offices now being at Grand Forks and providing for a state health officer at a salary of $3,600 a year. While the appropriation was not as much as was desired by health workers, it is felt that the bill provides the framework for a real department for the state according to Rep. Anderson, Burleigh county, who supported the bill.

To Help Lignite Sales.

Burleigh county and other western counties will find gratification in the result of the fight to insert an item in the immigration department appropriation to permit the department to co-operate with the North Dakota Lignite Coal Operators association in the development of the lignite coal industry. A bill creating a coal commission without pay to study the situation and report to the legislature was defeated by opposition from eastern counties, and the appropriation for Dean Babcock's experiments with lignite briquetting at Hebron was cut from $100,000 to $5,000 for two years. The Mandan fair came through in good shape with a $6,000 appropriation for two years, and the representatives of Morton county were satisfied, although the appropriation was a decrease from the $10,000 appropriation of two years ago. Provision was made for much new building at the state training school at Mandan.

Rep. Anderson of Burleigh county led the fight for an increased wolf bounty, regarded as of much importance in the development of the sheep and turkey raising industry in western North Dakota.

Rep. Heaton's bill, house bill No. 4, was the first to pass the house and be signed by the governor, it correcting a condition with reference to railroad equipment sales.

A. C. Is Busy.

Senator Sperry, Burleigh county, teamed with the representatives, bills affecting the county being watched in both houses. Senator Sperry introduced with Senator McCoy and anti-Klux Klan bill and the mine inspection act which resulted in revision of the mine inspection laws.

The Association of Commerce of Bismarck was active, both as to protecting Bismarck interest and to assist members of the legislature since Bismarck is the state capitol. Early in the session the A. C. named a legislative committee, which was in close touch with various committees and co-operating with the Burleigh county delegation.

Burleigh county, as well as many other counties in the western part of the state, had a rocky road to travel in the legislature, because of domination by eastern state interests, particularly Cass county. The fight on the highway commission was directed largely by Cass county men, and Reps. Anderson and Harrington of Burleigh county organized the house of representatives forces fighting their effort.

One paramount tendency of this age, I think, has been to make its youth truthful. Things are done now in the open.

If a boy wants to pay attention to a girl he does so and tells his parents. Candor, if encouraged, opens the door for correction.

Do not gain the impression that I am tolerantly inert. Such is not so. I merely look with a mother's eye into the motives that actuate youth. Those motives are not bad.

A little advice, much education and more love will assure the moral integrity of our children. These must come from the parents.

THAW CUTS SNOW COVER

Farm Stocks of Potatoes Present a Problem

The general thaw that set in over the region during the last few days of February greatly reduced the snow cover which is now practically gone from lower levels west of the Red River valley, says the report of the U. S. Crop Statistician, issued from Grand Forks today. The resulting moisture has been generally favorable for winter grains, although some damage by smothering is feared in Minnesota if an ice cover forms. County roads were mostly passable at the close of the month and farm haulings about average, except in western North Dakota where the volume of movement has been prolonged by the larger crop and earlier car shortage. The livestock situation continues satisfactory with lighter than usual winter losses indicated.

Farm stocks of potatoes are presenting something of a problem, with market demand and movement remaining sluggish. Some sections of Minnesota now report potatoes being fed in quantities to stock. South Dakota reports many frozen potatoes and similar damage has been found where farm pits have been opened in North Dakota. Only normal spring losses are now anticipated for livestock in the Dakotas where open ranges and adequate feed supplies are reported. March and October being the months in which farm lease payments and crop shares become due, there is usually some shifting of tenancy in the region at this time, however, in South Dakota there is reported to be an unusually large number of tenant farms changing hands this spring and numerous farm auctions listed. While farm labor demands for most part have yet to develop North Dakota already reports demand for farm help much improved. The state reports follow:

He claimed Snider told him he had taken his wife to a doctor and the doctor said she was incurable and it "was no use to spend any more money on her." He also said Snider remarked that he'd lose his second wife the same as he did his first.

OLD COW MAN OF N. D. DIES

Dickinson, N. D., March 6.—Word has been received in this city of the death of C. F. Higgins at Logan, N. Mex., on February 27. Mr. Higgins was well known to all the old time cattlemen of this section, having been associated in this line with such prominent early ranchers as A. N. Jeffries, George M. Frye and W. L. Richards. It was while engaged in cowpunching out in the country south that he was in some manner thrown from his horse and severely injured, lying out on the open prairie for 36 hours before help reached him. Mr. Higgins never fully recovered from this experience as creeping paralysis set in, and he was obliged to give up his active cowboy life.

The family took up their residence in this city, residing on First Avenue West, in the house which is now occupied by Prof. C. Roy Williams and family. Mr. and Mrs. Higgins and their two daughters left Dickinson for the west about 14 years ago. It is understood that for the past couple of years or so Mr. Higgins had been making his home with a sister at Logan, where he passed away. Interment was to take place at Altus, Okla.

Mr. Higgins was a member of the local Masonic order.

RECREATION HELD FOE OF DELINQUENCY

Social Worker for County and
City Details Work Done in
The Past Year

NEED PLAY GROUNDS

Well supervised recreational facilities are urged by Miss Elsie H. Lawrence, social worker for the Red Cross, Burleigh county and the city of Bismarck, as a means of reducing juvenile delinquency. In a report covering more than a year's period, Miss Lawrence detailed to the city commission the work of the social worker during the time and conclusions drawn from experience.

Describing the work of the Red Cross in connection with soldier aid case she says:

"During the year of 1922 and 1923, from Feb. 15 to March 1, there were 318 social cases passed through the Red Cross office, 118 of which are still active. This work included problems of the widow, deserting husband and shiftless men, as well as the work with transient and dependent, neglected and delinquent children. The soldier cases were transferred from the box folders to a direct filing system and in this way it was found that over 700 cases have been cared for by the Burleigh county American Red Cross. At the present time 98 cases are active. Mandan has discontinued its soldier work, and is paying the Bismarck office $10 per month for looking after a dozen active cases. Since the Veterans Bureau reports that there are 60 men needing assistance in filing their claims, Morton county, we hope to increase the number of active claims, as the compensation will be commensurate with the amount of work done."

"Although it is a general opinion that the war work done, the claims which have been successfully prosecuted by this office show that we still have a big work in caring for our disabled men," the report continues.

The claims adjusted during the year showed 10 compensation claims, averaging from $100 to $500, except active T. B. cases obtained hospitalization and back compensation; 11 men assisted in securing vocational training, seven are receiving treatment without compensation for disabilities which they received in service; eight men have secured dental treatment through the local office. A total of 48 claims were adjusted. Work continues on 98 claims.

Quoting from a letter from a soldier the report says "I wish here to again commend the splendid work of Mrs. F. L. Conklin, who has donated her full time to the soldier work."

There are 48 widows in Burleigh county receiving Mothers' Pensions, the average of which is $35 per month.

"I should like to recommend a close supervision of the expenditures of these pensions to ascertain if the mothers are buying sufficient food and the children getting proper nourishment," says Miss Lawrence. "Standard budgets should be worked out with the mothers and help given in their homes so that they may become efficient housekeepers."

City relief is given to 19 families, the report continues, most of whom are men and women who are too old or incapacitated for work. The poor relief for the year Sept. 1, 1921 to Sept. 1, 1922, averaged $535.49 monthly, while from Sept. 1, 1922 to Jan. 1, 1923, the average was $394.45. This included the greater part of the period when the most relief is needed, since coal is supplied after September 1.

During the past year the social worker interviewed and advised 103 dependent delinquents, or defective children, which the report lists as follows: Unmarried mothers, 13; delinquent girls, 30; dependent children, 42; girls returned home, 8; crippled children, 6; feeble-minded, 9 (only one admitted to Grafton institution, none, 4 blind 1. Three of the unmarried mothers were sent to the Florence Crittenton home, two were married and two are receiving support for their babies.

"I believe that the only way that we can prevent delinquency is to have to have adequate recreational facilities for young people and hope that during the coming summer playgrounds will be maintained with adequate supervision," says Miss Lawrence. "Jane Addams says a play ground without supervision is the workshop of the devil, we would not recommend playgrounds unless they could be under the supervision of recreational director. The summer

DECISION OF SUPREME COURT

From Grand Forks County.

Jesse French and Sons Piano Company, a corporation, plaintiff and respondent, vs Geo. W. Gatts, sometimes doing business under the name and style of Geo. E. Getts Piano Company, Defendant and Appellant.

Syllabus: (1). Where a motion is made by the defendant to vacate a default judgment upon the ground of excusable neglect, and where at the time the judgment was entered, an answer, verified by the attorney for the defendant on information and belief, was on file, and the same was at issue, and such answer disclosed a defense on the merits, it is held that the affidavit of merits is not necessary, following Harris vs. Hession, 32 N. D. 25; 155 N. W. 41, and Peterson v. Finnegan, 45 N. D. 101; 176 N. 734.

(2) The action of the trial court in refusing to grant a motion to vacate a judgment under Section 7483 C. L. 1913 will not be reversed by this court except for manifest abuse of discretion. For reasons stated in the opinion, it is held that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to grant the motion of the defendant to vacate the judgment entered against him. # MASTER WILL DECIDE WATER COMPANY RATE

Judge Booth's Memorandum
Decision in Case Received
in Bismarck

ISSUES INJUNCTION

The next step in the case of the Bismarck Water Supply Company against Railroad Commission involving rates of the company is expected to be the appointment of a master by the federal court to take testimony on the matter of whether or not the rates laid down by the railroad commission are confiscatory. This was the rule filed in a Minot utility case in which similar action was taken.

The case of the local company first went before the federal court in August, 1922, on application by the water company for an injunction to restrain the railroad commission from enforcing the ten-existing rates. The court, composed of three judges granted an interlocutory injunction upon conditions, one of which was that "pending the final hearing plaintiff should not charge rates higher than 35 percent in excess of then-existing rates. Another condition was that the injunction should not interfere with the investigation then being carried on by the railroad commission with a view of establishing just and reasonable rates."

Since that time, the memorandum of Judge Wilbur Booth of federal court, St. Paul, says, the railroad commission has prescribed a 16-23 percent increase instead of the 35 percent increase. Based upon a supplemental bill and affidavits, the plaintiff asked for a restraining order against the enforcement of the new rates.

Doubts Premise

Judge Booth's memorandum contains:

"The presumption is that the new rates prescribed are just and reasonable, and I should be loath to interfere by restraining order with the rates thus prescribed until after a final hearing of the cause, if the showing made on this application consisted simply in comparing conflicting evidence as to values and drawing conclusions therefrom."

"But a somewhat careful perusal of the record that has been introduced at this hearing has raised in my mind grave doubts whether the conclusions of the Commission, on which the new rates were based, were not reached either by assuming wrong premises, or by erroneous reasoning, or both; and also whether a materially different result would not have been reached if these errors had been avoided."

"Of course it is not possible from this preliminary hearing to state positively these conclusions, but they appear more than probable from the consideration I have been able to give the matter. To be more specific, in the case of the City of Minneapolis vs. Rand, Receiver, decided by the Circuit Court of Appeals of this circuit in January 1923, a number of the same questions involved in the case at bar were discussed and determined. One was that the matter of 'going value' could not properly be disregarded in making up a rate-base for a public utility, even though the past financial history of the utility company showed large earnings and in excess of what, under state supervision, would be considered by the Commission, apparently on the ground disapproved by the Court in the case just cited."

Must Consider Prices

"Again, in the same case, the court decided that the present-day prices, though caused by the war, not only should be considered in making the valuation of a utility company's property, but that, to some extent at least, the utility company was entitled to have the benefit of such increased prices caused by the war, if they continued to be the prevailing prices. It would appear from the language of the decision of the commission in the case at bar that it did not follow the above view in making its valuation of the utility company's property."

Judge Booth, after quoting from the railroad commission decision, said: "This court is of course bound by the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals of this circuit, and must be guided by the principles laid down in those decisions, in passing upon such matters as valuation of a utility company's plant, going value, etc. As stated above, it is a matter of grave doubt in my mind whether the Railroad Commission has not disregarded those principles in the present controversy."

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

THE ASSEMBLY'S RECORD

The eighteenth general assembly sent more bills to the Governor than any session in recent years. A large number were unimportant measures, being repeal laws of little moment and minor changes in existing laws.

Of the important actions of the assembly, the banking laws, tax laws, election laws and the industrial enterprises enactment rank as the chief work of the assembly.

The action of the assembly on the various state-owned, state-operated enterprises indicates on the part of the legislature either a general agreement, or a general resignation, to keeping the state engaged in business which competes with private business, and attempting particularly to make the state of North Dakota a big manufacturer of flour.

The liquidation of the Home Building Association does not take the rank it might, since the association has been virtually dormant and the bond issue law under which its extensive operation was contemplated was not workable. Nor does the liquidation of the experimental creamery, since that business also was virtually wound up nearly two years ago.

Operation on the Grand Forks mill and elevator on a big scale, particularly the mill business, was provided in enactments of the legislature. In addition to the $2,500,000 sunk into the enterprise the legislature authorized $2,000,000 additional bonds and additional credit will be obtained through the Bank of North Dakota or other sources. Perhaps the most unfortunate effect of the development of the mill business, granting that it is successful, is that it is likely to injure many private mills operating in the state, paying taxes and providing means of employment in many towns and cities.

The claim by some of the Nonpartisans before the session opened that a general attack would be made on all the league laws was not borne out. If there is an attack it is in the provisions contained in some laws not drawn for the purpose their title represents. Before the session ended there was agreement between the Nonpartisans and the Independents on most questions of the state industries, and apparently as far as these factions are concerned, there is not much of a political issue left on the state industrialism question.

More stringent banking laws were adopted, which ought to operate for the general good if wisely administered. Unwisely administered harm can result. This, of course, is true wherever great power is lodged in a board, such as the Depositors Guaranty Fund Commission. An important request to the legislature was ignored—giving a board power to approve or reject charters for new banks—a measure of precaution for the public and banking business both. The Guaranty Fund Commission, if it acts wisely and courageously, may under the authority given avert many of the lamentable experiences of the last two years.

The tax burden will be shifted in the new tax laws, to what extent is unknown until after a trial. Assessment of city residence property will be greater, and possibly there will be a slight easing of the burden on business property. The income tax will be chiefly a tax upon business, and there is a question as to how far a state income tax should go, since the federal government income tax is considered a permanent policy, though subject to change, and high rates on both federal and state income taxes may prove a burden not only onerous but an actual check upon business development.

The legislature did not, as was expected, cut appropriations to the bone. The totals are not yet completed, but many of the state department and institutional appropriations were increased over two years ago. The use of the veto power by Governor Nestos may remedy this defect in the record of the eighteenth legislative assembly.

The election laws will not be operative until 1924. It appears certain that they will be referred to a vote of the people. At this time many political observers, some favorable to the laws, predict they will be defeated. If, as is contended by many persons, the laws mean a prolongation of the Nonpartisan league and the terrific factional warfare in North Dakota in the last six years, by forcing the league into new life and giving it a new issue, the laws indeed will have been unfortunate for North Dakota.

There are many things about the record of the eighteenth legislative assembly that deserve commendation. The apparent desire upon the part of the great majority to look at the welfare of the state from a common-sense standpoint, the steady application of members to their task, and the absence of freakish legislation are among them. The wisdom of the action of the assembly on some of the laws, particularly the tax and banking laws, can only be tested by the actual operation of these laws.

PRICES

On the first of February, the cost of living of the average American wage-earner's family was 58 per cent higher than in July 1914. Putting it another way, it cost $1.58 to buy what could be bought for $1 just before the war started. The figure was $2.04 when retail prices reached their peak in 1920.

Compared with a year ago, cost of living is down—a trifle. Not so loud on the echo.

SELFISH

American government and American private individuals have contributed $50 million dollars to European relief since the last shot of the World War was fired. So announces James W. Rosenberg, official of one of the relief organizations.

And still Europe thinks we're selfish because we do not cancel what she owes us. Charity beats cancellation, for both sides. One thing about charity, it doesn't release funds for European arming-to-the-teeth.

THE CANAL ISSUE IN CANADA

In their advocacy of the proposed ship canal connecting the St. Lawrence river and the Great Lakes with the sea the representatives of the grain-growing and manufacturing industries of Western Canada and Ontario are as active and perhaps somewhat more insistent than their neighbors south of the international boundary. Recently an appeal was made to the Canadian government to proceed at once in negotiations with the United States government with the purpose of reaching a treaty agreement under which the project could be immediately advanced. Those composing the delegation which presented the appeal represent no divided opinion. They claim to see in the realization of the deep-waterway plan and the opening of lake ports to traffic a possible release from existing industrial bondage. Like the farmers and manufacturers in the northern sections of the Middle West in the United States, they feel that they owe little, if anything, to existing transportation systems, which have so long maintained a practical monopoly in handling their products.

There are indications that the plan will meet little, if any, opposition from the Canadian government. The delegates were informed by Mackenzie King, the premier, according to press dispatches, that matters had progressed much further, in fact, than the delegates seemed to realize. He stated that while he, individually, could not proceed to a conclusion, President Harding had proposed a definite treaty agreement under which the canal would be constructed. The whole question, so far as Canada is concerned, he declared to be one which parliament must consider and settle. He intimated that the matter would be taken up at an early date.

But, of course, the unanimity of opinion expressed by the representatives from Western Canada, like that existing in the Middle West in the United States, is by no means expressive of the sentiment of the seaboard sections of the East. The proposed shifting of established ports to inland or lake ports, of a considerable bulk of commodity exports, is not regarded without apprehension in the Atlantic coast cities. If the project of the canal is ever decided upon, it must be by the preponderant opinion of those people who see in the proposed equalization of transportation more than an immediate pecuniary loss to the Eastern centers. And by right there is much more to be considered than this, and much more, even, than the immediate gain which will accrue to the producers and shippers of the Middle West. Cheaper freight rates for the greater agricultural sections involved will, undoubtedly, be reflected in benefits to all the people, both in Canada and in the United States. Considerations of initial cost and of prestige monopolies should not be permitted to weigh heavily in determining a national and international policy of such magnitude. — Christian Science Monitor.

LIGNITE IN AUSTRALIA

The government of Victoria, Australia, is taking steps for the utilization of the lignite deposits in that province for the generation of electricity at the mine and its distribution for power purposes over a wide area.

The scheme provides for the erection of a generating station on the coalfield with an initial capacity of 100,000 kilowatts, but capable of doubling. The estimated cost is about $12,000,000, for the initial development, and over $25,000,000 for the final project. The first section will include four 12,500 kilowatt turbo-alternators running at 3000 r. p. m., with an 800-kilowatt set for starting up the bigger ones. The boilers and the steel for the buildings are actually under construction, and preliminary steps are being taken for the erection of the high-tension transmission line of 112 miles to a point near Melbourne. This line is to operate at 132,000 volts, and will consist of 100,000 steel reinforced cable strung on galvanized towers 1,000 feet apart.

The "brown coal" of Victoria is quite similar to the lignite of North Dakota, and its possibilities are similar. We may rest assured that in the near future steps will be taken to utilize our western coal in like manner, and thus to make available the vast store of energy which now lies undeveloped, and merely awaiting opportunity to become an active force in our civilization. — Grand Forks Herald.

THE LEEDS BANK ROBBERY

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Copyright, 1922, by E. Phillips Oppenheim

BEGIN HERE TODAY

SIR NORMAN GREYES, formerly of Scotland Yard, is devoting his time to tracking down MICHAEL SAYERS, arch criminal. Sayers is known to Greyes under the alias of Stanfield. Michael drives in a small car to Brown's bank in the suburbs of Leeds, shoots the manager through the shoulder, strikes the clerk senseless and robs the bank of over 7000 pounds. Stepping from the bank into a touring car in which JANET SOALE, his confederate, awaits him, Sayers races for Scotland. A confederate named Roberson takes charge of the small car and is arrested but freed for want of evidence. Michael passes the stolen notes to men in two motor cars and a motorcycle, leaving on evidence of theft on Sayers' person.

Sir Norman Resumes

"You seem to have done everything possible, Birmingham," I said at last, "but I think as my Norway trip has fallen flat, I shall go up to Scotland for a fortnight. Would you like me to call over at Leeds and see if I can pick up anything?" "Exactly what I hoped you would suggest," he confessed eagerly. "I have brooded over the affair so long that I can think of nothing but the obvious side. The Chief will give you a letter to the Leeds people. Would you like me to come with you?" I shook my head.

That night I traveled down to Leeds. There was nothing about the neighborhood which differed materially from Birmingham's description. I paid a visit to the place at exactly the hour the robbery had been committed, walked from the grocery store to the bank, carefully timing myself, and made some trifling purchases inside the shop. The neighborhood seemed to be thickly built over and populated in patches, but here and there were vacant lots. The land opposite the grocery was marked out for building, but operations as yet had not begun. Later in the day I operated Roberson to ground in his favorite public-house. Choosing my opportunity, I addressed him.

"Are you the man whom the police made such idiots of themselves about in this bank robbery?" I asked. "What the hell's that to do with you?" he answered. "His tone was truculent, but he obviously only needed a little humor."

"Just this much," I replied. "I am a journalist representing one of the picture papers. It would be worth a fiver to you if you would let me do a sketch of you."

His manner changed at once. "Not likely," I assured him, commencing a rough sketch in a notebook which I had put into my pocket for that purpose. "I read the case myself. A fool could see that you had nothing to do with it."

He stopped drinking and looked at me curiously. "I was the police," I went on. "I should want to know a little more about the two tourists on their way to Scotland."

ALL RIGHT, DOWN, THEN!!!

to eight I passed up the long, neglected drive and presented myself at the front door of the somber-looking house. The summons of a harsh bell was answered almost immediately by an immaculate butler, Janet, from the other end of the cool white hall, came forward to meet me. The dinner was well cooked; the champagne was excellent; and my host, with a twinkle in his eyes, called my attention to the fact that it was opened in my presence. As soon as the last course was concluded, Janet led the way out onto the flagged terrace, where a table was already arranged with desert and coffee.

"You are a brave man, Sir Norman," my hostess said abruptly. "Why?" I asked.

"You know and you alone—that I once killed a man—although you don't altogether know why," she went on softly. "How do you know that I have not within me the makings of a modern Lucretia? I have read quite a good deal about poisons—I may be said even to have studied the subject and you have delivered yourself into my hands."

"Why should you poison me?" I argued. "I will do both you and your husband the credit to believe that you don't bear malice. Revenge is a senseless sentiment."

My host leaned forward in his chair. His face was solemn and brooding.

"You have something against me dating from far back," he said.

I nodded. "But I am in the same position as Scotland Yard," I reminded him. "For those things I have no case. For those misdemeanors of which I suspect you in the past, I could at the present moment go only so far as to procure a warrant charging you with feloniously wounding a police inspector. For the rest, I suspect, but I have no proof."

"You suspect what?" he asked. I shook my head.

"There are limits to my candor," I protested mildly. "You must admit that I am not secretive or unduly aloof, inasmuch as I dine at your table, discuss your necessities and pass on, like an ordinary guest. What I may suspect of the past I keep to myself. I am your enemy, and you know it. If it pays you to attempt to murder me, I imagine you will try."

"Janet would desert me if I did," he declared with a grim smile. "She finds these little conferences with you so inspiring."

She looked at me with that wonderful smile of hers. She was a little way behind a pillar, and her face was hidden from her husband.

"I do not like to hear you say that we are enemies," I murmured. "I would rather think that we are like the soldiers who fight in two opposing armies. We fight because it is our duty. Even that does not interfere with personal feelings."

"That's true," I admitted carelessly. "I could never absolutely dislike a man who played such good golf as your husband."

"And what about me," she demanded. "You drive me to be obvious," I replied. "No one could possibly dislike a person who contributed to the beauty of the world."

She laughed softly. "Why, you're a courtier, Sir Norman," she declared. "Your compliments and the perfume of those roses and the flavor of the Benedictine are getting into my head. I begin to picture you as the serpent who crawled into this Utopian paradise."

"Talking about golf," her husband intervened in a harsh tone. "What about a game, Sir Norman? Will you play me tomorrow morning?" "You need not take salt," he said grimly.

"I shall be delighted," I assented. "About eight o'clock I suppose?" "Not about," I implored you. Janet answered earnestly. "Sandy shall catch you some trout this afternoon, and they must be served to the second. Say a quarter to eight, please."

"I will be punctual," I promised.

I spent the afternoon wandering about the moor, inspecting the golf links and speaking on the telephone. Punctually at twenty minutes

The cowboy had come into town for a good time. He had $300 or so, the fruit of many months' hard work on the range. It was in the days before Volstead had done his work, so of course the cattle puncher headed for the nearest saloon.

It was a tough place, and into his customer's very first drink the bartender poured knockout drops.

The next morning the cowboy awoke with a headache, sick, dizzy and disgusted. He had no memory of any fun at all. His money had been taken from him, his horse had been stolen and even his gun was missing.

Sore, sour and disgruntled, the unfortunate individual started to walk 25 miles back to the ranch, cursing fate. A little way out of town he saw another man on the trail, ahead of him. The stranger bent down to lace his shoe.

With a growl, the cowboy kicked him, snarling:

"Damn you, you're always lacing your shoe in front of me."

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

By Olive Barton Roberts

And you can imagine, my dears, how the schools got mixed up in Mix-Up Land.

The schoolmaster was ringing his bell as the Twins passed and he asked them in.

So they thanked him and went inside. The scholars sat with their backs to the teacher, the writing on the blackboard was upside down, and the stove was on the ceiling. Instead of taking their wraps off, the children put them on, and instead of taking their books out to study, they hid them away. Everybody talked at once and nobody learned a thing.

"What shape is the earth?" asked the schoolmaster.

"Square!" answered the school. "Good!" Now spell 'boy,' commanded the master.

"G-i-r-l," spelled the school. "Name the days of the week," was the next thing.

"Sunday, Saturday, Friday, Thursday, Wednesday, Tuesday, Monday," was the answer.

"Many eggs in a dozen?" "Eleven."

"Where is the north pole?" "In the middle of the earth."

"Where's the moon?" "At the bottom of the sea."

"What is five and five?" "Nothing."

"Say your A B C's." "Z Y X W V U T S R Q P O N M L K J I H G F E D C B A," answered the school promptly.

"Fine," declared the schoolmaster proudly. "You are smart children and have nothing more to learn. There is no use having school any more. You are dismissed for good."

"Don't you mean until Mix-Up Land turns back into Apple-Pie Land?" asked Nick.

"Yes," said the schoolmaster. "But it doesn't look much like it."

MANDAN NEWS

Flood Threatens N. P. Tracks

Flood water in the Cannon Ball river has threatened to carry away the Northern Pacific railroad grade at Cannon Ball and Breien, according to reports from those parts.

The Northern Pacific has had work trains and large crews of men filling sandbags and cutting brush and throwing this rip rap on the banks in an effort to save the south line grade just west of Cannon Ball station.

The only loss to farmers reported to date is that of Wesley Baker who lives on the old Van Solen-Parkin ranch just across the river from town. Baker is reported to have lost 20 head of hogs.

Water in the Cannon river is dropping slowly back. While it is still up in the west end of Mandan and the syndicate and dog town districts are still more or less flooded people are at work pumping out their basements.

Reports coming in yesterday and today indicate that the training schools were in a bad condition as a result of the flood. Their training system was put out of condition by the flood and the school buildings completely flooded.

The 200 or more porkers which were supposed to have been lost by the Mandan Creamery and Produce company were found to be all safe. It is thought that when all damages are checked up, losses will not be so very great. Some of the homes have lost their foundations, but that is about the most serious damage.

Mrs. Victor Mattson who has been a guest at the home of her mother in law, Mrs. H. Tackaberry, left last evening for her home in Jamestown. During her visit here Mrs. Mattson was taken ill and underwent an operation at the hospital for appendicitis.

Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Iverson have as their guest, the former's brother, Ben Iverson of Benson, Minn.

Mrs. F. L. Roquette who has been a guest since Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Shaw has returned to her home in Dickinson.

DISILLUSION

I'm always a bit optimistic. I've always been prone to aver that people were very much better than, frankly, I knew that they were;

But even the cheerfulness person Must learn—from his life or his window

That the stuff in the pastry-cook's window Is seldom as good as it looks!

Those mountains of marvelous pastry cream, Those fairy-like cakes and concoctions,

How toothsome and dainty they seem! Beware, they are snares and delusions;

Constructed by false-hearted crooks, The stuff in the pastry-cook's window Is seldom as good as it looks!

80 Attend Banquet Given by Auxiliary

Covers were laid for 80 guests at the banquet given by the Auxiliary of the American Legion at the Grand Pacific hotel, with Miss Madge Runey introducing each speaker with appropriate remarks.

Mrs. Viola B. Fouts, of Towne, state chaplain of the auxiliary, spoke words of invocation.

Mrs. Ferris Corder, president of the Bismarck auxiliary, spoke of plans of the auxiliary for the coming year. Mrs. Genevieve Menard pleased her hearers with a vocal solo. Mrs. Corder, as commander of the local American Legion spoke on the needs of a club house for the men. Dr. J. O. Arnsen spoke on the relation of the Legion to the community. Major George H. Russ discussed "What the Legion and Auxiliary Should Do in North Dakota."

Mrs. J. W. Hiley, representing the Way Mothers of Bismarck, brought a message from her organization to the women of the auxiliary.

A patriotic solo was pleasingly given by Mrs. John Larson. In addition to the regular numbers of the program the crowd was led in the singing of patriotic songs by Mrs. John Larson, with Mrs. Genevieve M. Hughes presiding at the piano.

The committee composed of Mrs. Ida Dierksen, chairman, Mrs. Anna Selvig Huber, and Mrs. Ferris Corder, deserve great credit for the affair which is another step toward cooperation between the Legion and Auxiliary in future undertakings.

Entertain at Birthday Party

Mr. Otto Holm of 511 Washington Ave. entertained at a surprise birthday party Saturday evening in honor of Mr. Holm who celebrated his birthday anniversary at that time.

Letter From John Alden Prescott To Leslie Hamilton

You will notice that I have written no salutation at the beginning of this letter, Leslie darling.

It is not because I want to be unconventional, sweetheart, but because I have found no endearing word in our language that adequately embodies what you are to me.

When I put you on the train this noon—after three weeks of such thrilling happiness as I did not think could come to anyone on this earth—my heart became leaden at the thought that I would not see you for at least a month, and my only comfort was that at the end of that time I would go to you to bring you back to be with me always.

After leaving you I came back to the office and plunged into work. Honestly, Leslie dear, I wanted to forget you—it hurt me so when I remembered and realized that when night came you would be hundreds of miles away from me.

After an hour of loneliness, so poignant that the discomfort was almost physical, I gave it up as a bad job, rushed out of the office, got into the roadster—that roadster which has been blessed with your dear presence, and ate up the miles for hours.

Oh, my girl, my girl, how am I going to get through the next weary days, and weeks—and perhaps months? You know that I think it is foolishness that we must have a wedding and that you must have a trousseau if, because of them, we will lose out of our lives all this eternity of companionship and love?

And to think that three weeks ago, my darling, I did not know there was such a girl as you in all the world. It doesn't seem possible that I could have lived all these years without you. I rail at Fate for keeping you so long from me.

At this moment my fingers are tingling with the desire to touch that little curl behind your ear.

You will never know, dear heart, how much will power it took in the long, long time before I told you that I loved you, to keep from kissing that curl of red gold hair. I noticed it the moment I met you. Its invitation was the most alluring thing I have ever known. It threw the transparent whiteness of your skin into high relief. It made me think of alabaster, warmed by a hidden human flame.

Strange, isn't it, that such a little thing as a lock of red gold hair will change the whole destiny of a man? I remember that for days after meeting you, I could feel the electric thrill of that lock of hair, caressingly entwining itself about my fingers. The days passed only too quickly when I was with you and time crawled on leaden feet when you were away from me.

One moment I asked myself why a girl like you should care for a man like me, and I grew cold with fear that you would not love me, and then I said to myself, "A love like mine must bring something in return." I knew that you were the one girl in all the world for me—all other women that I had known seemed but shadows flitting across a dim screen of half remembrance.

This latter, dear one, will probably seem to you the ravings of a mad man. I am mad, dearest; mad with love for you. And as I write to you tonight, I know that you and I were meant for each other from the beginning of time and if I had not met you now, my spirit would have gone through other countless eons, seeking you.

For it was written in the Book of Fate that some day—and thank God that some day is to be soon—you and I would be one!

Dear heart, I hope at this moment you are thinking of me as I am thinking of you—I hope that you wish that my lips were softly

THE AUTHOR'S FOREWARD

It has been said many times that no one writes letters nowadays, but if one should gather together all the letters that are passed between friends and neighbors and relatives, one could easily piece out the story of the tangle we call life.

For many years I have saved the notes and letters from my friends, simply because I wanted to carry out this theory.

The ensuing serial has not all of it come to me in the shape of letters, as the reader will see. But when my friends found that I intended to write a story of this kind about a little group of people, they began to look among their human documents and I was deluged with notes and other data, just as when a biography is written from the rescue of the biographer with memoranda.

It is a strange thing how the lives of people are bound together and yet withal each person is absolutely solitary.

In this story—most of which is true—of a group of people that I have known all my life, the reader will find, if he follows closely, the human qualities of everyone, including himself.

My characters are average people, some good and some poor; none of them very good and none of them thoroughly bad.

My only hope is that those who read this story, told by these letters, telegrams and other data will be as interested in it as I was in writing it.

It goes without saying, that in an intimate story of this kind, I have written as I see things, and I am not signing her name.

THE AUTHOR.

Saving Steps in The Garden

Plan for convenience in the garden. Convenience in the garden is just as essential as it is in the kitchen, the laundry, the garage or the stable. Economy of steps and work should be the main consideration. Place the vegetables most commonly used nearest to the kitchen door. The early spring vegetables should be conveniently at hand where the family chef may step out to gather the crisp young radishes, onions, lettuce and early spinach. These early vegetables often will have to be picked in rainy weather when proximity will be appreciated. The permanent vegetables, such as asparagus and thubut, should be placed where they will be least in the way and least interfere with the efficiency of the general garden plan. Their space cannot be shared by other vegetables and should be at one side of the garden, usually the one most distant from the house.

The tallest vegetables such as corn, pole beans, and tomatoes should be placed to the side of the garden rather than in the middle space where it will be necessary to go around them to reach lower vegetables on either side.

After leaving you I came back to the office and plunged into work. Honestly, Leslie dear, I wanted to forget you—it hurt me so when I remembered and realized that when night came you would be hundreds of miles away from me.

After an hour of loneliness, so poignant that the discomfort was almost physical, I gave it up as a bad job, rushed out of the office, got into the roadster—that roadster which has been blessed with your dear presence, and ate up the miles for hours.

Oh, my girl, my girl, how am I going to get through the next weary days, and weeks—and perhaps months? You know that I think it is foolishness that we must have a wedding and that you must have a trousseau if, because of them, we will lose out of our lives all this eternity of companionship and love?

And to think that three weeks ago, my darling, I did not know there was such a girl as you in all the world. It doesn't seem possible that I could have lived all these years without you. I rail at Fate for keeping you so long from me.

At this moment my fingers are tingling with the desire to touch that little curl behind your ear.

You will never know, dear heart, how much will power it took in the long, long time before I told you that I loved you, to keep from kissing that curl of red gold hair. I noticed it the moment I met you. Its invitation was the most alluring thing I have ever known. It threw the transparent whiteness of your skin into high relief. It made me think of alabaster, warmed by a hidden human flame.

Strange, isn't it, that such a little thing as a lock of red gold hair will change the whole destiny of a man? I remember that for days after meeting you, I could feel the electric thrill of that lock of hair, caressingly entwining itself about my fingers. The days passed only too quickly when I was with you and time crawled on leaden feet when you were away from me.

One moment I asked myself why a girl like you should care for a man like me, and I grew cold with fear that you would not love me, and then I said to myself, "A love like mine must bring something in return." I knew that you were the one girl in all the world for me—all other women that I had known seemed but shadows flitting across a dim screen of half remembrance.

This latter, dear one, will probably seem to you the ravings of a mad man. I am mad, dearest; mad with love for you. And as I write to you tonight, I know that you and I were meant for each other from the beginning of time and if I had not met you now, my spirit would have gone through other countless eons, seeking you.

For it was written in the Book of Fate that some day—and thank God that some day is to be soon—you and I would be one!

Dear heart, I hope at this moment you are thinking of me as I am thinking of you—I hope that you wish that my lips were softly

THE AUTHOR'S FOREWARD

It has been said many times that no one writes letters nowadays, but if one should gather together all the letters that are passed between friends and neighbors and relatives, one could easily piece out the story of the tangle we call life.

For many years I have saved the notes and letters from my friends, simply because I wanted to carry out this theory.

The ensuing serial has not all of it come to me in the shape of letters, as the reader will see. But when my friends found that I intended to write a story of this kind about a little group of people, they began to look among their human documents and I was deluged with notes and other data, just as when a biography is written from the rescue of the biographer with memoranda.

It is a strange thing how the lives of people are bound together and yet withal each person is absolutely solitary.

In this story—most of which is true—of a group of people that I have known all my life, the reader will find, if he follows closely, the human qualities of everyone, including himself.

My characters are average people, some good and some poor; none of them very good and none of them thoroughly bad.

My only hope is that those who read this story, told by these letters, telegrams and other data will be as interested in it as I was in writing it.

It goes without saying, that in an intimate story of this kind, I have written as I see things, and I am not signing her name.

THE AUTHOR.

pressing that little curl just back of your ear.

Darling, in all the universe there are only two people; and though parted, you are still close, close in the heart of—

Your lover, always—JOHN.

Saving Steps in The Garden

Plan for convenience in the garden. Convenience in the garden is just as essential as it is in the kitchen, the laundry, the garage or the stable. Economy of steps and work should be the main consideration. Place the vegetables most commonly used nearest to the kitchen door. The early spring vegetables should be conveniently at hand where the family chef may step out to gather the crisp young radishes, onions, lettuce and early spinach. These early vegetables often will have to be picked in rainy weather when proximity will be appreciated. The permanent vegetables, such as asparagus and thubut, should be placed where they will be least in the way and least interfere with the efficiency of the general garden plan. Their space cannot be shared by other vegetables and should be at one side of the garden, usually the one most distant from the house.

The tallest vegetables such as corn, pole beans, and tomatoes should be placed to the side of the garden rather than in the middle space where it will be necessary to go around them to reach lower vegetables on either side.

CAPITOL THEATRE

"Broadway Rose," which yesterday opened at the Capitol Theatre, is sure to appeal to those who found pleasure in Miss Murray's recent productions. "Peacock Alley" and "Fascination," and that means nearly everyone who goes to the movies. For in "Broadway Rose" Miss Murray has an interesting story giving everything seems entirely new. Lloyd's box of tricks seems everlasting and one never knows what to expect, except that the next laugh will be louder than the first. As a fun-maker, Mr. Lloyd has reached the pinnacle, but in "Dr. Jack" he had also established himself as a runner-up for honors with the screen's greatest lovers, as his love scene with Mildred Davis seemed to us to be one of the most delightful we have ever witnessed.

Newest Color This Season Is Mountain Haze

"Mountain Haze" is the name of the one and only spring shade—so fashion authorities say.

Neither orchid, wisteria nor heliotrope, it's similar to all and each of these colors—touched up a bit with couleur de rose.

Of the gowns sketched, one is of mountain haze flat crepe, combined with black; the other is of mountain haze chiffon and silver tissue.

her role which affords every opportunity for the unusual ability which has made her recent pictures a joy to see. In the present picture she is a country girl who has won the favor of Broadway by her ability as a dancer. She loves Hugh Thompson, the son of wealthy Fifth Avenue parents who are bitterly opposed to his infatuation. Seeking only happiness for herself and the man she loves, she consents to a secret marriage in order to avoid an open break between Hugh and his family. But they discover the fact, and are relentless in the determination that their son's life shall not be ruined by such an alliance. The complications which ensue bring Rosalie very near to disaster, but in the end she finds real happiness.

Business Integrity

Confidence is the framework on which our credit structure is built. The currency of a nation (i. e. the paper money) is valueless in itself—but it circulates freely from hand to hand because people have confidence in the willingness and the ability of the issuer to redeem in full this promise to pay. The stability of the currency of any nation, however, prevails only insofar as there is continuing confidence in the good faith and soundness of the government and industry of that nation.

The currency of Russia is valueless, and that of Germany practically so, because these countries have worked their printing presses to such excess that it is evident that they cannot and will not redeem in full. Holland and Switzerland, on the contrary have avoided monetary difficulties by confining their currency issues to amounts which are within the limit of their ability to pay. The funding of the British debt to the United States is an evidence of national integrity which should increase the exchange value of the pound sterling.

Business integrity is rewarded whether its possessor be a government or private enterprise. For over forty years the First National Bank has maintained its position as a bulwark of the business organization of the community, unstinting in its efforts for the further development of its commercial and agricultural interests throughout the various periods of prosperity and depression. This has been possible because its patrons have placed their confidence in the good faith and integrity of the institution.

We solicit the retention of the business of our present clients and the establishment of new connections on the basis of our past record.

Social and Personal

80 Attend Banquet Given by Auxiliary

Covers were laid for 80 guests at the get-together dinner given by the Ladies Auxiliary of the American Legion last evening at the Grand Pacific hotel, with Miss Madge Runey introducing each speaker with appropriate remarks.

Mrs. Viola B. Fouts, of Towson, state chairman of the auxiliary, spoke words of invocation.

Mrs. Ferris Corder, president of the Bismarck auxiliary, spoke on plans of the auxiliary for the coming year. Mrs. Genevieve Menard pleased her hearers with a vocal solo, Mrs. Corder, as commander of the local American Legion spoke on the needs of a club house for the men. Dr. J. O. Arnsen spoke on the relation of the Legion to the community. Major George H. Russ discussed "What the Legion and Auxiliary Should Do in North Dakota." Mrs. J. W. Riley, representing the War Mothers of Bismarck, brought a message from her organization to the women of the auxiliary.

A patriotic solo was pleasingly given by Mrs. John Larson. In addition to the regular numbers of the program the crowd was led in the singing of patriotic songs by Mrs. John Larson, with Mrs. Genevieve M. Hughes presiding at the piano.

The committee composed of Miss Lella Diesem, chairman, Mrs. Anna Selvig Huber, Mrs. George N. Kohn, and Mrs. E. C. White, were given credit for the affair which is another step toward cooperation between the Legion and Auxiliary in future undertakings.

Entertain at Birthday Party

Mrs. Otto Holta of 511 Washington Ave. entertained at a birthday party Saturday evening in honor of Mr. Holta who celebrated his birthday anniversary at that time.

Decorations with pink and white carnations were charmingly carried out in the Holta home. The evening was spent by the guests in playing whist with the honors for high score being won by Johnnie George. At midnight a course luncheon was served, covers being laid for twelve.

Out of town guests at the party were Mrs. G. C. Pearson, Mrs. Charles Pruett, and Mrs. Smith, all of Kalm.

P. E. O. Sisterhood Elect Officers

At the meeting of the P. E. O. Sisterhood at the home of Mrs. S. E. Hollingsworth yesterday afternoon officers for the coming year were elected. The program was devoted to a study of the P. E. O. constitution with Mrs. F. E. Smyth as leader.

Officers elected were: Mrs. Charles Staley, president; Mrs. H. S. Doherty, vice president; Mrs. George N. Kohn, recording secretary; Mrs. E. B. Cox, corresponding secretary; Mrs. H. F. O'Hare, treasurer; Mrs. R. S. Towne, Mrs. Marvin Schoellkopf, guard.

Letter From John Alden Prescott To Leslie Hamilton

You will notice that I have written no salutation at the beginning of this letter, Leslie darling.

It is not because I want to be unconventional, sweetheart, but because I have found no endearing word in our language that adequately embodies what you are to me.

When I put you on the train this noon—after three weeks of such thrilling happiness as I did not think could come to anyone on this earth—my heart became leaden at the thought that I would not see you for at least a month, and my only comfort was that at the end of that time I would go to you to bring you back to be with me always.

After leaving you I came back to the office and plunged into work. Honestly, Leslie dear, I wanted to forget you—it hurt me so when I remembered and realized that when night came you would be hundreds of miles away from me.

After an hour of loneliness, so poignant that the discomfort was almost physical, I gave it up as a bad job, rushed out of the office, got into the roadster—that roadster which has been blessed with your dear presence, and ate up the miles for hours.

Oh, my girl, my girl, how am I going to get through the next weary days, and weeks—and perhaps months? You know that I think it is foolishness that you must have a wedding and that you must have a trousseau if, because of them, we will lose out of our lives all this eternity of companionship and love?

And to think that three weeks ago, my darling, I did not know there was such a girl as you in the world. It doesn't seem possible that I could have lived all these years without in some way finding you before this. I rail at Fate for keeping you so long from me.

At this moment my fingers are tingling with the desire to touch that little curl behind your ear. You will never know, dear heart, how much will power it took in the long, long time before I told you that I loved you, to keep from kissing that curl of red gold hair.

I noticed it the moment I met you. Its invitation I have ever known. It threw the transparent whiteness of your skin into high relief. It made me think of alabaster, warmed by a hidden human flame.

Strange, isn't it, that such a little thing as a lock of red gold hair will change the whole destiny of a man? I remember that for days after meeting you, I could fairly feel the electric thrill of that lock of hair, caressingly entwining itself about my fingers.

The days passed only too quickly when I was with you and Time crawled on leaden feet when you were away from me.

One moment I asked myself why a girl like you should care for a man like me, and I grew cold with fear that you would not love me, and then I said to myself, "A love like mine must bring something in return." I knew that you were the best girl in all the world for me—all other women that I had known seemed but shadows fitting across a dim screen of half remembrance.

This letter, dear one, will probably seem to you the ravings of a mad man. I am mad, dearest; mad with love for you. And as I write to you tonight, I know that you and I were meant for each other from the beginning of time and if I had not won you now, my spirit would have gone through other countless eons, seeking you.

For it was written in the Book of Fate that some day—and thank God that some day is to be soon—you and I would be one!

Dear heart, I hope at this moment you are thinking of me as I am thinking of you—I hope that you wish that my lips were softly

THE AUTHOR'S FOREWORD

It has been said many times that no one writes letters nowadays, but if one should gather together all the letters that are passed between friends and neighbors and relatives, one could easily piece out the story of the tangle we call life.

For many years I have saved the notes and letters from my friends, simply because I wanted to carry out this theory. The ensuing serial has not all of it come to me in the shape of letters, as the reader will see. But when my friends found that I intended to write a story of this kind about a little group of people, they began to look among their human documents and I was deluged with notes and other data, just as when a biography is written, friends and acquaintances come to the rescue of the biographer with memoranda.

It is a strange thing how the lives of people are bound together and yet with each person is absolutely solitary.

In the story—most of which is true—of a group of people that I have known all my life, the reader will find, if he follows closely, the human qualities of everyone, including himself.

My characters are average people, some rich, some poor; none of them very good and none of them thoroughly bad.

My only hope is that those who read this story, told by these letters, telegrams and other data, will be as interested in it as I was in writing it.

It goes without saying, that in an intimate story of this kind, where many a reader will recognize himself or herself, the author may not sign her name.

pressing that little curl just back of your ear.

Darling, in all the universe there are only two people; and though parted, you are still close, close in the heart of—

Your lover, always—JOHN.

Saving Steps in The Garden

Plan for convenience in the garden. Convenience in the garden is just as essential as it is in the kitchen, the laundry, the garage or the stable. Economy of steps and work should be the main consideration. Place the vegetables most commonly used nearest to the kitchen door. The early spring vegetables should be conveniently at hand where the family chef may step out to gather the crisp young radishes, onions, lettuce and early spinach.

These early vegetables often will have to be picked in rainy weather when proximity will be appreciated. The permanent vegetables, such as asparagus and rhubarb, should be placed where they will be least in the way and least interfere with the efficiency of the general garden plan. Their space cannot be shared by other vegetables and should be at one side of the garden, usually the one most distant from the house.

The tallest vegetables such as corn, pole beans, and tomatoes should be placed to the side of the garden rather than in the middle spaces where it will be necessary to go around them to reach lower vegetables on either side.

"Mountain Haze" is the name of the one and only spring shade—so fashion authorities say.

Neither orchid, wisteria nor heliotrope, it's similar to all and each of these colors—touched up a bit with couleur de rose.

Of the gowns sketched, one is of mountain haze flat crepe, combined with black; the other is of mountain haze chiffon and silver tissue.

her role which affords every opportunity for the unusual ability which has made her recent pictures a joy to see. In the present picture she is a country girl who has won the favor of Broadway by her ability as a dancer. She loves Hugh Thompson, the son of wealthy Fifth Avenue parents who are bitterly opposed to his infatuation. Seeking out happiness for herself and the man she loves, she consents to a secret marriage in order to avoid an open break between Hugh and his family. But they discover the facts, and are relentless in the determination that their son's life shall not be ruined by such an alliance. The complications which ensue bring Rosalie very near to disaster, but in the end she finds real happiness.

THE ELTINGE

"If a comparison is to be made of the funny business of the screen for the last year, honors must go to Mr. Lloyd."

So wrote Quinn Martin, screen editor of the New York World after seeing "Dr. Jack," Harold Lloyd's new five part comedy which is the attraction at the Eltinge theatre for tonight, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

"Dr. Jack" is a delicious conglomeration of everything one could hope for in a super-comedy. And

As a fun-maker, Mr. Lloyd has reached the pinnacle, but in "Dr. Jack" he had also established himself as a runner-up for honors with the screen's greatest lovers, as his love scene with Mildred Davis seemed to us to be one of the most delightful we have ever witnessed.

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

THE ASSEMBLY'S RECORD
The eighteenth general assembly sent more bills to the Governor than any session in recent years. A large number were unimportant measures, being repeal laws of little moment and minor changes in existing laws.

Of the important actions of the assembly, the banking laws, tax laws, election laws and the industrial enterprises enactment rank as the chief work of the assembly.

The action of the assembly on the various state-owned, state-operated enterprises indicates on the part of the legislature either a general agreement, or a general resignation, to keeping the state engaged in business which competes with private business, and attempting particularly to make the state of North Dakota a big manufacturer of flour.

The liquidation of the Home Building Association does not take the rank it might, since the association has been virtually dormant and the bond issue law under which its extensive operation was contemplated was not workable. Nor does the liquidation of the experimental creamery, since that business also was virtually wound up nearly two years ago.

Operation on the Grand Forks mill and elevator on a big scale, particularly the mill business, was provided in enactments of the legislature. In addition to the $2,500,000 sunk into the enterprise, the legislature authorized $2,000,000 additional bonds and additional credit will be obtained through the Bank of North Dakota or other sources. Perhaps the most unfortunate effect of the development of the mill business, granting that it is successful, is that it is likely to injure many private mills operating in the state, paying taxes and providing means of employment in many towns and cities.

The claim by some of the Nonpartisans before the session opened that a general attack would be made on all the league laws was not borne out. If there is an attack it is in the provisions contained in some laws not drawn for the purpose their title represents. Before the session ended there was agreement between the Nonpartisans and the Independents on most questions of the state industries, and apparently as far as these factions are concerned, there is not much of a political issue left on the state industrialism question.

More stringent banking laws were adopted, which ought to operate for the general good if wisely administered. Unwisely administered harm can result. This, of course, is true wherever great power is lodged in a board, such as the Depositors Guaranty Fund Commission. An important request to the legislature was ignored—giving a board power to approve or reject charters for new banks—a measure of precaution for the public and banking business both. The Guaranty Fund Commission, if it acts wisely and courageously, may under the authority given avert many of the lamentable experiences of the last two years.

The tax burden will be shifted in the new tax laws, to what extent is unknown until after a trial. Assessment of city residence property will be greater, and possibly there will be a slight easing of the burden on business property. The income tax will be chiefly a tax upon business, and there is a question as to how far a state income tax should go, since the federal government income tax is considered a permanent policy, though subject to change, and high rates on both federal and state income taxes may prove a burden not only onerous but an actual check upon business development.

The legislature did not, as was expected, cut appropriations to the bone. The totals are not yet completed, but many of the state department and institutional appropriations were increased over two years ago. The use of the veto power by Governor Nestos may remedy this defect in the record of the eighteenth legislative assembly.

The election laws will not be operative until 1924. It appears certain that they will be referred to a vote of the people. At this time many political observers, some favorable to the laws, predict they will be defeated. If, as is contended by many persons, the laws mean a prolongation of the Nonpartisan league and the terrific factional warfare in North Dakota in the last six years, by forcing the league into new life and giving it a new issue, the laws indeed will have been unfortunate for North Dakota.

There are many things about the record of the eighteenth legislative assembly that deserve commendation. The apparent desire upon the part of the great majority to look at the welfare of the state from a common-sense standpoint, the steady application of members to their task, and the absence of freakish legislation are among them. The wisdom of the action of the assembly on some of the laws, particularly the tax and banking laws, can only be tested by the actual operation of these laws.

PRICES

On the first of February, the cost of living of the average American wage-earner's family was 58 per cent higher than in July 1914. Putting it another way, it cost $1.58 to buy what could be bought for $1 just before the war started. The figure was $2.04 when retail prices reached their peak in 1920.

Compared with a year ago, cost of living is down—a trifle not so loud on the echo.

SELFISH

American government and American private individuals have contributed 850 million dollars to European relief since the last shot of the World War was fired. So announces James W. Rosenberg, official of one of the relief organizations.

And still Europe thinks we're selfish because we do not cancel what she owes us. Charity beats cancellation, for both sides. One thing about charity, it doesn't release funds for European arming-to-the-teeth.

THE CANAL ISSUE IN CANADA

In their advocacy of the proposed ship canal connecting the St. Lawrence river and the Great Lakes with the sea the representatives of the grain-growing and manufacturing industries of Western Canada and Ontario are as active and perhaps somewhat more insistent than their neighbors south of the international boundary. Recently an appeal was made to the Canadian government to proceed at once in negotiations with the United States government with the purpose of reaching a treaty agreement under which the project could be immediately advanced. Those composing the delegation which presented the appeal represent no divided opinion. They claim to see in the realization of the deep-waterway plan and the opening of lake ports to traffic a possible release from existing industrial bondage. Like the farmers and manufacturers in the northern sections of the Middle West in the United States, they feel that they owe little, if anything, to existing transportation systems, which have so long maintained a practical monopoly in handling their products.

There are indications that the plan will meet little, if any, opposition from the Canadian government. The delegates were informed by Mackenzie King, the premier, according to press dispatches, that matters had progressed much further, in fact, than the delegates seemed to realize. He stated that while he, individually, could not proceed to a conclusion, President Harding had proposed a definite treaty agreement under which the canal would be constructed. The whole question, so far as Canada is concerned, he declared to be one which parliament must consider and settle. He intimated that the matter would be taken up at an early date.

But, of course, the unanimity of opinion expressed by the representatives from Western Canada, like that existing in the Middle West in the United States, is by no means expressive of the sentiment of the seaboard sections of the East. The promised shifting, from established ports to inland lake ports, of a considerable bulk of commodity exports, is not regarded without apprehension in the Atlantic coast cities. If the project of the canal is ever decided upon, it must be by the unanimous opinion of those people who see in the proposed equalization of transportation more than an immediate pecuniary loss to the Eastern centers. And by right there is much more to be considered than this, and much more, even, than the immediate gain which may accrue to the producers and shippers of the Middle West. Cheaper freight rates for the great agricultural sections involved will, undoubtedly, be reflected in benefits to all the people, both in Canada and in the United States. Considerations of initial cost and of prestige or monopolies should not be permitted to weigh heavily in determining a national and international policy of such magnitude. — Christian Science Monitor.

LIGNITE IN AUSTRALIA

The government of Victoria, Australia, is taking steps for the utilization of the lignite deposits in that province for the generation of electricity at the mine and its distribution for power purposes over a wide area.

The scheme provides for the erection of a generating station on the coalfield with an initial capacity of 50,000 kilowatts, but capable of doubling. The estimated cost is about $12,000,000, for the initial development, and over $25,000,000 for the final project. The first section will include four 12,500 kilowatt turbo-alternators running at 3000 r. p. m., with an 800-kilowatt set for starting up the bigger ones. The boilers and the steel for the buildings are actually under construction, and preliminary steps are being taken for the erection of the high-tension transmission line of 112 miles to a point near Melbourne. The line is to operate at 132,000 volts, and will consist of aluminum-steel reinforced cable strung on galvanized towers 1,000 feet apart.

The "brown coal" of Victoria is quite similar to the lignite of North Dakota, and its possibilities are similar. We may rest assured that in the near future steps will be taken to utilize our western coal in like manner, and thus to make available the vast store of energy which now lies undeveloped, and merely awaiting opportunity to become an active force in our civilization. — Grand Forks Herald.

THE LEEDS BANK ROBBERY
BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM
Copyright, 1922, by E. Phillips Oppenheim
Agent, NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
SIR NORMAN GREYES, formerly of Scotland Yard, is detecting his way to reaching down.
MICHAEL SAYERS, arch criminal, is known to Greyes under the alias of Stanfield. Michael drives in small car to Brown's bank in the suburbs of Leeds, shoots the manager through the shoulder, strikes the clerk senseless and robs the bank of over 7000 pounds. Stepping from the bank into a touring car in which JANET SOALE, his confederate awaits him, Sayers races for Scotland. A confederate named Brown takes charge of the small car and is arrested but freed for want of evidence. Michael passes the stolen notes to men in two motor cars, and a motorcycle, leaving an evidence of theft on Sayers' person.
SIR NORMAN RESUMES
"You seem to have done everything just like a Rimmington," I said at last, but I think, as my Norway trip has been flat, I shall go up to Scotland for a fortnight. Would you like me to call over at Leeds and see if I can pick up anything?"
"Exactly what I hoped you would suggest," he confessed eagerly. "I have brooded over the affair so long that I can think of nothing but the obvious side. The thief will give you a letter to the Leeds people. Would you like me to come with you?"
I shook my head.
"That night I traveled down to Leeds."
There was nothing about the neighborhood which differed materially from Rimmington's description. I paid a visit to the place at exactly the hour the robbery had been committed, walked from the grocery store to the bank, carefully timing myself, and made some trifling purchases inside the shop. The neighborhood seemed to be thickly built over and populated in patches, but here and there were vacant lots. The land opposite the grocery was marked out for building, but operations as yet had not begun. Later in the day I tracked Roberson to ground in his favorite public-house. Choosing my opportunity, I addressed him.
"Are you the man whom the police made such idiots of themselves about in this bank robbery?" I asked.
"What the hell, that to do with you?" he answered.
His tone was truculent, but he obviously only needed a little humoring.
"Just this much," I replied. "I am a journalist representing one of the picture papers. It would be worth a fiver to you if you would let me do a sketch of you."
His manner changed at once.
"You don't want an interview?"
"Not likely," I assured him, commencing a rough sketch in a notebook which I had put into my pocket for that purpose. "I read the case myself. A fool could see that you had nothing to do with it."
He stopped drinking and looked at me curiously.
"If I were the police," I went on, "I should want to know a little more about the two tourists on their way to Scotland."
"Then you're as big a fool as the police," he retorted gruffly. "They hadn't nothing to do with it. They were filling up with petrol and neither of them budged from the car."
I smiled in a superior way and went on watching. He watched me with thinly veiled anxiety.
"Toffs they were," he went on, "on their way up for a bit of sport."
"Maybe," I commented. "They didn't seem in any hurry about it."
"What do you mean?"
"I don't see why they stayed at the Queen's two nights," I remarked.
"Who said they stayed?" he demanded. "They stayed 'one night' and grumbled at having to do that."
"How do you know?" I asked, looking up at him.
"I spoke to the chauffeur," he replied sullenly. "He told me my oil was leaking."
I chanced the subject, finished my ridiculous sketch, and handed over the five pounds. That night I caught the mail train to Scotland.
It took me less than a week to discover the whereabouts of the man and the woman who I learned were passing under the name of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Groves. On the morning after my arrival at the very remote corner of Scotland where they had taken up their temporary abode, I committed an indiscretion. I donned a huckaback suit and set out for a tramp over the moors. I had just clambered up to the top of a little ridge overlooking the sea, when I came face to face with a little party ascending it from the other side. The little party consisted of the person I had known chiefly as Mr. Stanfield, his wife, a villainous-looking gillie, and two dogs. I was a curious moment, full of suggestions of tragedy, afterward ridiculous in its conventionality. I saw the flash of the man's gun, and I saw the woman's hand restrain him, heard the single word whispered in his ear. I raised my cap; he followed.

YOU DON'T MEAN YOU SLOWED UP, EVERETT, YOU MEAN SLOWED DOWN.
ALL RIGHT, DOWN, THEN!!!

to eight I passed up the long, neglected drive and presented myself at the front door of the somber-looking house. The summons of a harsh bell answered almost immediately by an immaculate butler, Janet, from the other end of the cool white hall, came forward to meet me. The dinner was well-cooked; the champagne was excellent; and my host with a twinkle in his eyes, called my attention to the fact that it was opened in my presence. As soon as the last course was concluded, Janet led the way out onto the flagged terrace, where a table was already arranged with desert and coffee.

By John N. Garner
U. S. Representative From Texas, Fifteenth District
The cowboy had come into town for a good time. He had $300 of "o-o," the fruit of many months' hard work on the range. It was in the days before Volstead had done his work, so of course the cattle puncher headed for the nearest saloon. It was a tough place, and into his customer's very first drink the bartender poured knockout drops. The next morning the cowboy awoke with a headache, sick, dizzy and disgusted. He had no memory of any fun at all. His money had been taken from him, his horse had been stolen and even his gun was missing. Sore, sour and disgruntled, the unfortunate individual started to walk 25 miles back to the ranch, cursing fate. A little way out of town he saw another man on the trail, ahead of him. The stranger bent down to lace his shoe. With a growl, the cowboy kicked him, snarling: "Damn you, you're always lacing your shoe in front of me."

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

By Olive Barton Roberts
And you can imagine, my dear, how the school got mixed up in Mix-Up Land.
The schoolmaster was ringing his bell as the Twins passed and he asked them in.
So they thanked him and went inside.
The scholars sat with their backs to the teacher, the writing on the blackboard was upside down, and the stove was on the ceiling. Instead of taking their wraps off, the children put them on, and instead of taking their books out to study, they hid them away. Everybody talked at once and nobody learned a thing.
"What shape is the earth?" asked the schoolmaster.
"Square!" answered the school. "Good! Now spell 'boy.'" commanded the master.
"G-r-i-l," spelled the school. "Name the days of the week," was the next thing.
"Sunday, Saturday, Friday, Thursday, Wednesday, Tuesday, Monday," was the answer.
"How many eggs in a dozen?" "Dozen."
"Where is the North pole?" "In the middle of the earth."
"Where's the moon?" "At the bottom of the sea."
"What is five and five?" "Nothing."

MANDAN NEWS

Flood Threatens N. P. Tracks

Flood water in the Cannon Ball river has threatened to carry away the Northern Pacific railroad grade at Cannon Ball and Breckenridge to reports from those parts. The Northern Pacific has had work trains and large crews of men filling sandbags and cutting brush and throwing this rip rap on the banks in an effort to save the south line grade just west of Cannon Ball station.

The only loss to farmers reported to date is that of Wesley Baker who lives on the old Van Solen-Parkin ranch just across the river from town. Baker is reported to have lost 20 head of hogs.
Water in the Heart river is dropping slowly but it is still up in the west end of Mandan and the syndicate and dog town districts are still more or less flooded people are at work pumping out their basements.

Reports coming in yesterday and today indicate that the raining schools were in a bad condition as a result of the flood. Their heating system was put out of condition by the flood and the school buildings completely flooded.
The 200 or more porkers which were supposed to have been lost by the Mandan Greenery and Produce company were found to be safe. It is thought that when all damages are checked up, losses will not be so very great. Some of the homes may have lost their foundations, but that is about the most serious damage.

Mrs. Victor Mattson who has been guest at the home of her mother in law, Mrs. H. Tacka, berry, left last evening for her home in Jamestown. During her visit here Mrs. Mattson was taken ill and underwent an operation at the hospital for appendicitis.
Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Iverson have as their guest, the former's brother, Ben Iverson of Benson, Minn.

Mrs. F. L. Roquette who has been a guest since Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Shaw has returned to her home in Dickinson.

Anton Fritz, formerly of this city, has purchased a general store in Killdeer, and has left to take charge.

Newest Major Umpire Boasts Of Experience

When President B. B. Johnson of the American League signed Emmett (Red) Ormsby, former marine, to umpire in his circuit next year, he also signed Howard (Ducky) Holmes.

These two worked in the Western League last season. They were teamed and made the best pair of arbiters in the loop. Holmes, with more experience than Ormsby, acted as instructor and adviser to Ormsby and the combination was ideal.

Holmes has had considerable experience and was regarded as one of the best arbiters in the minors in recent years. Two seasons ago he got a trial with the National League, but President Tanager of the Western refused to permit him to join the National League last spring and left him in the Western.

Holmes formerly played ball. He was a catcher, at one time with the St. Louis Cardinals. He also managed in the minor leagues.

Georgetown Is Losing Stars To Toronto

Georgetown university is another college to feel the effects of professional leagues grabbing off its stars. No less than three of the Georgetown players have been signed up this year—all by one team.

Art Reynolds, star right-handed pitcher, credited with his alma mater's diamond success last year, has been taken on by the Toronto club of the International League. Sam Hyman and Bill Kenney, two of the team's mates last year, will also report to Toronto this spring.

Billy Evans Says—

If you pack the well-known punch in any line of endeavor you possess the most essential asset to fame and fortune.

A few months ago I saw two clever lightweights put up what I considered a great exhibition of boxing. Little damage was inflicted, there were no knockdowns, no blood was spilled, but despite all this there was action every minute.

I never saw better footwork, neater boxing, faster action in the clinches, or better sportsmanship. During the 12 rounds not once did the referee lay a hand on either boy. At his command to break, they immediately stepped back and broke clean. Once, one of the contestants slipped to the floor and became slightly entangled with the ropes. His rival graciously helped him to his feet.

It was a clean, fast exhibition, yet it failed to please. It was too clever for most of the spectators. Both boys had too good a defense.

In other words, neither packed a knockout punch. In the fight game, the count of 10 carries the same thrill as a wallop over the fence in baseball with the bases filled. At one stage of the fight some of the displeased fans whistled the Merry Widow waltz, while the boys, with their brilliant footwork, glided about the ring.

All of which brings us back to the opening statement that the fellow who packs the punch is always on the verge of doing big things.

The ring has known few brainier fighters than Johnny Kilbane. Kilbane, to use a sporting term, has everything—even the punch when he sets to use it.

However, throughout his ring career, Johnny has been content to win in the easiest manner possible. The fact that he has held the championship over 10 years, while most champions fade out in two or three years, makes it seem that Kilbane has the right system.

Yet Kilbane, because he has always saved his hands, rarely trying for knockouts, has never reached the heights of popularity that have crowned fighters of the Stanley Ketchel, Bob Fitzsimmons, Terry McGovern or Jack Dempsey type.

It's the same story in baseball. The player who can smack 'em is the big favorite.

Joe Williams, Keeler, who recently died at his home in Brooklyn, was the brainy type of batsman. A master of the art of bunting, and a wonderful place hitter, Keeler was one of the most dangerous batters in the history of baseball.

The feats of Keeler required much thought and effort, plus perfect coordination. While Keeler was appreciated by those actively connected with the game, the fans never marveled at his feats as they did the record-breaking wallops of Babe Ruth.

Keeler, unlike Ruth, never broke the attendance record in practically every city he ever played. Keeler never received the homage from the fans that has been paid Ruth, yet the feats of Keeler were infinitely more difficult.

We are living in an era of swat. You must pack a punch if you seek the big things and are looking for the hero worship.

SECOND TEAM LOST

Ashley basketball fans say that it was the high school second team which was defeated recently by the Lehr Independent team, and do not like the inference that it was the Ashley first team which lost.

The Ashley team, in going to Lehr for the game, traveled by bob sled.

MINOR LEAGUE STAR PUZZLE SCOUTS

Pitcher Walker, Phenom in Minors, Thrice Fails in Majors

JAMES WALKER

Why do some players who are sensations in the minors fail to deliver in the majors?

Why do other players who meet with only fair success in the bushes develop into major league stars? That has been a deep, dark mystery for years to major league scouts and managers. It will probably remain so forever.

It is peculiar, too, for the rough fundamentals of the game are the same in the minors as in the majors. Take the case of James Roy Walker, a six-foot right-handed pitcher of speed, curves and enough pitching stuff according to major league experts, to live a long life as a major leaguer.

Walker was given a trial with the Cleveland Indians about six years ago. He was noted for control in the minors. In the American League he four-balled his way back to the minors.

Pulled a Comeback. In the minors again, Walker regained his bearings and once more pitched himself to a major league trial. In 1918 he became a member of the Chicago Cubs. But Walker failed for the second time.

In looking for pitching strength for his Cardinals in 1921 Branch

Rickey was tipped off to Walker, then with the New Orleans Pelicans. Walker had won 27 games and lost 11 with New Orleans.

In the Southern League that year were Johnny Glazner, Johnny Morrison, Clyde Barfoot, Indian Yellowhorse, Thomas Sheehan, Johnny Suggs and Dazzy Vance, all of whom advanced to the majors.

Walker was touted as easily the best prospect of the bunch, a pitcher ready to take his turn as a big league regular. That's what Rickey was looking for.

Star in the Minors. A year and a half with the Cardinals and Walker had failed for the third time and back to New Orleans he drifted.

When the 1922 pitching averages of the Southern League were issued it was discovered that Walker was the prize of the list. He had won 10 of the 11 games in which he pitched and he featured with an earned-run column of 1.32, the best pitching record of the season for all leagues.

Five games were won by shutouts and he had three on-hit victories. Major league scouts say that there isn't another pitcher who compares with Walker as a minor league pitcher. But the color changes when Walker tackles the big-time stuff.

New Pittsburgh Manager Profits By Mistakes Of Former Leader

By NEA Service

Pittsburgh, March 6.—An experiment tried by George Gibson in starting the 1922 season with the Pittsburgh Pirates is answered with the familiar line: "You can't teach an old dog new tricks."

Although Max Carey had been recognized as one of the most brilliant center fielders in the National League and Carson Bigbee the equal of anything in left field Gibson switched these two stars in opening the season. Carey moved over to left and Bigbee was in center.

Of course, Gibson had a motive for such a change. What is it was no one ever learned, but the Pirates lost the first three games to the Cardinals in St. Louis with Carey in left and Bigbee in center.

As the center fielder Bigbee misjudged drives that Carey could have caught his eyes closed.

And there was Max over there in left field unable to get the focus and the range of things in his strange home.

After the series with the Cardinals Gibson admitted that he had blundered and Max was back in center, while Bigbee was in left.

The peculiar part about it all is that the Pirates with their regular combination in the field went out and won six straight games. Max was snatching those low and long drives, while Bigbee was going to the edge of the left field wall and over to the foul line for spectacular catches.

"What about the Pirates as a pennant contender this year?" Bill McKee, manager, was asked recently.

"All that I can tell you about the Pirates at this moment," answered Bill, "is that Max Carey will play center field and Bigbee will be on left."

Brilliant Eddie Collins Tells How Speaker Once Showed Him Up

Eddie Collins is generally regarded as one of the brightest players in the major leagues. He richly deserves that distinction, because brains is always a part of his play.

However, it is possible for the best of players to be tricked and made to look foolish. Usually it takes an equally keen player to turn the trick.

Recently Collins was asked by an inquiring reporter if he had ever been made to look foolish on the ball field.

"Often," replied Collins, "but to this Speaker goes the credit of showing me up in the worst possible style, yet in being shown up I was playing safe, conservative ball. The umpire was the villain."

"It was this way. I was on second, another Sox player on first and one out. The batter hit a fly ball to short center field which I figured could be handled by an infielder and would be ruled an infield fly. For that reason I held my base."

"The umpire, however, failed to rule infield fly. Speaker trapped the ball back of second, then dashed in and touched me standing on the base, then touched the base."

"I had remained on second and the other runner held first, believing the hit had been ruled an infield fly. It wasn't, so when Speaker touched me standing on the base he retired me, and by touching the base he retired the runner on first who was forced to advance to make room for the batsman. That ended the inning with all hands looking foolish."

HAIR STAYS COMBED, GLOSSY

"Hair-Groom" Keeps Hair
Combed—Well-Groomed

Millions Use It—Fine for Hair!
—Not Sticky, Greasy or Smelly

Get a jar of "Hair-Groom" from any druggist for a few cents and make even stubborn, unruly or shampooed hair stay combed all day in any style you like. "Hair-Groom" is a dignified combing cream which gives that natural gloss and well-groomed effect to your hair—that final touch to good dress both in business and on social occasions.

Greaseless, stainless "Hair-Groom" does not show on the hair because it is absorbed by the scalp, therefore your hair remains so soft and pliable and so natural that no one can possibly tell you used it.

GIBBONS KNOCKS TRACY OUT IN SECOND ROUND

East Chicago, Mar. 6.—Tommy Gibbons, contender for the pugilistic laurel of Jack Dempsey, by knocking out Jim Tracy, Australian boxer, in the second round of their scheduled 10-round bout, added additional weight to his championship claims. A right cross to the Australian's jaw, after he had been down for the count of nine in the second round, ended the argument.

Although Tracy opened last night's bout here with a fast right to the St. Paul boy's head, he never had a chance.

HALLIDAY GIRLS ARE UNBEATEN

Halliday, N. D., Mar. 5.—The Halliday girls' basketball team defeated the quint from Werner at the auditorium Saturday afternoon for the second time this season. So far Halliday has defeated every team that she has played with during the year, not a game lost. At the early stage of the season she was handicapped on account of being shut out of practice, but the girls stepped out and won the first game just the same and has kept the winning streak up to the last. The players consist of Vivian Law, Viviette Viken, Lorna Ulness, Evelyn Strand, Maggie Bosch, Mary Christensen, Minnie Reimer and Ethel Kempshall.

Things We Have Always Known

The recent business condition has brought to the forefront of thought many fundamental considerations that have always been known but have been damned with faint praise.

Human nature in the mass is very much like human nature in the individual. One of its dominant characteristics has been summed up in the observation, "You never miss the water till the well runs dry." We never appreciate fundamental things until we have occasion to do without them.

This observation has a special application to the Demand of the public for the products of industry. While the Demand was at high tide and everybody was busy trying to supply that Demand at a profit no one, seemingly, gave a thought to where the Demand came from, how long it might last, or what would happen if it should fail. We merely assumed the permanent existence of the Demand, just as we assume the presence of water, air, and fire.

But a day came when Demand began to subside, and in many industries it came almost to a full stop. And then we missed it, and realized, as never before, what an important thing it was. And we began to inquire where it came from in the first place, and how it might be restored.

We always knew—everybody knew—that Desire for things made a Demand for them in the market. That people desired things we accepted as an elemental fact. But when we discovered that Desire fluctuated we began to appreciate that Desire, as we know it, is a thing created by the art of man. It is a highly specialized form of an elemental need—just as a Louis XVI chair is made out of a tree.

This discovery led to another equally important discovery that the means of refining and specializing that Desire was Advertising. The gigantic work that has been accomplished by modern advertising now stands out in bold relief. It has been the means by which the refinements of civilization have been made known and made desirable, and this desire has been made into Demand. It is a simple fact that a million profitable forms of industrial activity owe their very existence to the fact that Advertising upheld the standards of living which in turn provided the demand for their products.

ACTIVE BUYING AT OPENING BOOSTS PRICE

Chicago, Mar. 7.—Buying ascribed to a speculator who has of late been conspicuous on the bear side led to a sudden upturn in the price of wheat today during the early dealings. When this buying ceased, however, the market quickly reacted. Unresponsiveness which Liverpool quotations showed in response to yesterday's advance here counted as a handicap on response to yesterday's advance here counted as a handicap on the bulls and so, too, did mild weather likely to benefit the domestic wheat crop.

Opening prices which varied from unchanged figures to 3-8 cents lower with May, $1.18 1/2 to $1.18 3/4 and July $1.14 1/2 to $1.14 3/4, was followed by a rise all around to well above yesterday's finish and then a setback in which nearly all of the gain was lost.

Two seasons ago he got a trial with the National League, but President Tamm of the Western refused to permit him to join the National League last spring and held him in the Western.

Georgetown Is Losing Stars To Toronto

Georgetown university is another college to feel the effects of professional league grabbing off its stars. No less than three of the Georgetown players have been signed up this year—all by one team. Art Reynolds, star right-handed pitcher, credited with his alma mater's diamond success last year, has been taken by the Toronto club of the International League. Sam Hyman, major league last year, will also report to Toronto this spring.

Billy Evans Says—

If you pack the well-known punch in any line of endeavor you possess the most essential asset to fame and fortune.

A few months ago I saw two clever lightweights put up what I considered a great exhibition of boxing. Little damage was inflicted, there were no knockdowns, no blood, was spilled, but despite all this there was action every minute.

I never say better footwork, neater boxing, faster action in the trenches, or better sportsmanship during the 12 rounds of a fight, but the referee lay a hand on either boy. At his command to break, they immediately stepped back and broke clean. Once, one of the contestants slipped to the floor and became slightly entangled with the ropes. His rival graciously helped him to his feet.

It was a clean, fast exhibition, yet it failed to please. It was too clever for most of the spectators. Both boys had too good a defense.

In other words, neither packed a knockout punch. In the fight game, the court of 10 carries the same thrill as a wallow over the fence in baseball with the bases filled.

At one stage of the fight some of the displeased fans whistled the Merry Widow waltz, while the boys, with their brilliant footwork, glided about the ring.

All of which brings us back to the opening statement that the fellow who packs the punch is always in the verge of doing big things.

The ring has known few brainier fighters than Johnny Kilbane. Kilbane, to use a sporting term, has everything—even the punch when he sets to use it.

However, throughout his ring career, Johnny has been content to win in the easiest manner possible. The fact that he has held the championship over 10 years, while most champions fade out in two or three years, makes it seem that Kilbane has the right system.

Yet Kilbane, because he has always saved his hands, rarely trying for knockouts, has never reached the heights of popularity that have crowned fighters of the Stanley Ketchel, Bob Fitzsimmons, Terry McGovern or Jack Dempsey type.

It's the same story in baseball. The player who can smack 'em is the big favorite.

"Wee Willie" Keeler, who recently died at his home in Brooklyn, was the brainy type of batsman. A past-master of the art of bunting, and a wonderful place hitter, Keeler was one of the most dangerous batters in the history of baseball.

The feats of Keeler required much thought and effort, plus perfect coordination. While Keeler was appreciated by those actively connected with the game, the fans never marveled at his feats as they did the record-breaking wallows of Babe Ruth.

Keeler, unlike Ruth, never broke the attendance record in practically every city he ever played. Keeler never received the homage from the fans that has been paid Ruth, yet the feats of Keeler were infinitely more difficult.

We are living in an era of swat. You must pack a punch if you seek the big things and are looking for the hero worship.

Ashley basketball fans say that it was the high school second team which was defeated recently by the Lehr Independent team, and do not like the inference that it was Ashley first team which lost.

MINOR LEAGUE STAR PUZZLE SCOUTS

Pitcher Walker, Phenom in Minors, Thrice Fails in Majors

JAMES WALKER

By Billy Evans. Why do some players who are sensations in the minors fail to deliver in the majors?

Why do other players who meet with only fair success in the minors develop into major league stars? That has been a deep, dark mystery for years to major league scouts and managers. It will probably remain so forever.

It is peculiar, too, for the rough fundamentals of the game are the same in the minors as in the majors. Take the case of James Roy Walker, a six-foot, right-handed pitcher of speed, curves and enough pitching stuff according to major league experts, to live a long life as a major leaguer.

Walker was given a trial with the Cleveland Indians about six years ago. He was noted for control in the minors. In the American League he four-balled his way back to the minors.

Pulled a Comeback. In the minors again, Walker regained his bearings and once more pitched himself to a major league trial. In 1918 he became a member of the Chicago Cubs. But Walker failed for the second time.

In looking for pitching strength for his Cardinals in 1921 Branch

Rickey was tipped off to Walker, then with the New Orleans Pelicans. Walker had won 27 games and lost 11 with New Orleans.

In the Southern League that year were Johnny Glazner, Johnny Morrison, Clyde Barfoot, Indian Yellowhorse, Thomas Shuchan, Johnny Sauer and Dazzy Vance, all of whom advanced to the majors.

Walker was touted as easily the best prospect of the bunch, a pitcher ready to take his turn as a big league regular. That's what Rickey was looking for.

Star in the Minors. A year and a half with the Cardinals and Walker had failed for the third time and back to New Orleans he drifted.

When the 1922 pitching averages of the Southern League were issued it was discovered that Walker was the prize of the list. He had won 10 of the 11 games in which he pitched and he featured with an earned-run column of 1.33, the best pitching record of the season for all leagues.

Five games were won by shutouts and he had three on-hit victories. Major league scouts say that there isn't another pitcher who compares with Walker as a minor league pitcher. But the color changes when Walker tackles the big-time stuff.

New Pittsburg Manager Profits By Mistakes Of Former Leader

By NEA Service. Pittsburg, March 6.—An experiment tried by George Gibson in starting the 1922 season with the Pittsburg Pirates is answered with the familiar line: "You can't teach an old dog new tricks."

Although Max Carey had been recognized as one of the most brilliant center fielders in the National League and Carson Bigbee the equal of anything in left field Gibson switched these two stars in opening the season. Carey moved over to left and Bigbee was in center.

Of course, Gibson had a motive for such a change. What is it was no one ever learned, but the Pirates lost the first three games to the Cardinals in St. Louis with Carey in left and Bigbee in center.

As the center fielder Bigbee misjudged drives that Carey could have caught his eyes closed.

And there was Max over there in left field unable to get the focus and the range of things in his strange home.

After the series with the Cardinals Gibson admitted that he had blundered and Max was back in center, while Bigbee was in left.

The peculiar part about it all is that the Pirates with their regular combination in the field went out and won six straight games. Max was snatching those low and long drives, while Bigbee was going to the edge of the left field wall and over to the foul line for spectacular catches.

"What about the Pirates as a pennant contender this year?" Bill McKechnie, manager, was asked recently.

"All that I can tell you about the Pirates at this moment," answered Bill, "is that Max Carey will play center field and Bigbee will be on left."

Brilliant Eddie Collins Tells How Speaker Once Showed Him Up

Eddie Collins is generally regarded as one of the brightest players in the major leagues. He richly deserves that distinction, because brains is always a part of his play.

However, it is possible for the best of player to be tricked and made to look foolish. Usually it takes an equally keen player to turn the trick.

Recently Collins was asked by an inquiring reporter if he had ever been made to look foolish on the ball field.

"Often," replied Collins, "but to Tris Speaker goes the credit of showing me up in the worst possible style, yet in being shown up I was playing safe, conservative ball. The umpire was the victim."

"It was this way. I was on second, another Sox player on first and one out. The batter hit a fly ball to short center field which I figured could be handled by an infielder and would be ruled an infield fly.

For that reason I held my base. "The umpire, however, failed to rule infield fly. Speaker trapped the ball back of second, then dashed in and touched me standing on the base, then touched the base.

"I had remained on second and the other runner held first, believing the ball had been ruled an infield fly. It wasn't, so when Speaker touched me standing on the base he retired me, and by touching the base he retired the runner on first who was forced to advance to make room for the batsman. That ended the inning with all hands looking foolish."

HALLIDAY GIRLS ARE UNBEATEN

Halliday, N. D., Mar. 5.—The Halliday girls' basketball team defeated the quint from Werner at the auditorium Saturday afternoon for the second time this season. So far Halliday has defeated every team that she has played with during the year, not a game lost. At the early stage of the season she was handicapped on account of being shut out of practice, but the girls stepped out and won the first game just the same and has kept the winning streak up to the last. The players consist of Vivian Law, Vivienne Viken, Lorna Olness, Evelyn Strand, Maggie Roach, Mary Christensen, Minnie Reimer and Ethel Kempshall.

GIBBONS KNOCKS TRACY OUT IN SECOND ROUND

East Chicago, Mar. 6.—Tommy Gibbons, contender for the pugilistic laurel of Jack Dempsey, by knocking out Jim Tracy, Australian boxer, in the second round of their scheduled 10-round bout, added additional weight to his championship claims. A right cross to the Australian's jaw, after he has been down for the count of nine in the second round, ended the argument.

Although Tracy opened last night's bout here with a fast right to the St. Paul boy's head, he never had a chance.

Things We Have Always Known

The recent business condition has brought to the forefront of thought many fundamental considerations that have always been known but have been damned with faint praise.

Human nature in the mass is very much like human nature in the individual. One of its dominant characteristics has been summed up in the observation, "You never miss the water till the well runs dry." We never appreciate fundamental things until we have occasion to do without them.

This observation has a special application to the Demand of the public for the products of industry. While the Demand was at high tide and everybody was busy trying to supply that Demand at a profit no one, seemingly, gave a thought to where the Demand came from, how long it might last, or what would happen if it should fail. We merely assumed the permanent existence of the Demand, just as we assume the presence of water, air, and fire.

But a day came when Demand began to subside, and in many industries it came almost to a full stop. And then we missed it, and realized, as never before, what an important thing it was. And we began to inquire where it came from in the first place, and how it might be restored.

We always knew—everybody knew—that Desire for things made a Demand for them in the market. That people desired things we accepted as an elemental fact. But when we discovered that Desire fluctuated we began to appreciate that Desire, as we know it, is a thing created by the art of man. It is a highly specialized form of an elemental need—just as a Louis XVI chair is made out of a tree.

This discovery led to another equally important discovery that the means of refining and specializing that Desire was Advertising. The gigantic work that has been accomplished by modern advertising now stands out in bold relief. It has been the means by which the refinements of civilization have been made known and made desirable, and this desire has been made into Demand. It is a simple fact that a million profitable forms of industrial activity owe their very existence to the fact that Advertising upheld the standards of living which in turn provided the demand for their products.

CHICAGO OVERLAND BRANCH BREAKS ALL AUTO SHOW SALES RECORDS

519 Cars Sold at Retail During the Annual Automobile Show Week. One Chicago Dealer Placed Order for Entire Trainload.

All automobile show sales records were eclipsed by the Overland Motor company of Chicago, the Willys-Overland Branch in Chicago, with the announcement at the conclusion of the annual automobile show week by President A. C. Barber of the Overland Motor Company, that his organization and the Chicago dealers had sold 519 cars at retail during the show week from January 27 to February 3 inclusive.

This record more than doubled the mark set by the New York Branch which sold 230 cars during the annual New York automobile show, a record, which at that time was considered wonderful. But Chicago surpassed New York, more than doubled the retail sales.

"In all my experience with Willys-Overland," said President Barber, "I have never seen such enthusiasm, or such sales activity. Dealers and public alike received our new line with such wholehearted support that we were astounded. The results in sales made at retail are proof of this statement."

"And but for the fact that we had the most disagreeable weather of the entire winter, below zero weather in fact the last two days of the show, I believe that we would have topped our sales record of 519 retail sales."

David Gordon of the Standard Motor Company of Chicago, one of the dealers operating under the Chicago Branch, placed an order for an entire trainload of Willys-Overland cars, which has since been shipped to him.

R. A. Lindbaugh, another dealer under the Chicago Branch, whose car contract for 1923 was 61 cars, sold during the show week 45 cars at retail, or 75 percent of his quota for the year in 2 percent of the time. Mr. Lindbaugh is proprietor of the Central Garage and Machine Company at Maywood, Illinois.

To aid the dealers in making immediate deliveries of the cars sold during the show week, Mr. Barber chartered a special train of seven Pullman cars during the show, and sent 470 men to Toledo, who drove a like number of Overland and Willys-Knight cars back through the country to Chicago.

In addition, Mr. Barber placed one order for 1,142 cars, which will supply the immediate demands for immediate deliveries by dealers in the Chicago territory.

During the middle of the show week, Mr. Barber made the following prediction in the Chicago newspapers: "We venture to predict that our record at the end of the week will be a record of sales in excess of any ever recorded by any cars in our class for a like period anywhere." "The result has certainly borne out that prediction."

SEEKS NO REASON FOR ANY DELAY IN STRIKE MATTERS

MRS. ROSEN OF MANDAN IS HELD UP

Bandits Dressed as Women Try to Steal Her Valuables

St. Paul, March 6.—Police today were searching for two bandits dressed in women's clothes who held up Mrs. A. Rosen of Mandan, North Dakota, searched her and then ordered her to "get on." When she was accosted Mrs. Rosen attempted to pass between the bandits, but one of them slapped her so sharply, that she said, there seemed to be a masculine force in the blows.

A diamond ring and diamond ear pendants were not taken. No mention was made of what the robbers obtained.

CITY ELECTION APPROACHING

Two Commissioners, Police Magistrate and Justice To Be Chosen

With the legislative session discussion in politics locally has turned to the city election, which will be held on Tuesday, April 3. Commissioners will be selected for four-year terms, a police magistrate and one justice of the peace.

Registration days will be March 20th and March 27th. Petitions for nomination must be filed by March 14th.

Commissioners John Larson and John French, whose terms expire, will be candidates for re-election. Mr. Larson said that he would stand for re-election and Mr. French said that he expected petitions bearing his name would be filed.

Thus far no other candidates for the city commission have appeared. Police Magistrate W. C. Cashman said he would be a candidate for re-election. It is expected that there will be several candidates for this position.

CAPT. ELDRED DIES HERE

Special Coffin Needed to Bear Remains of Prison Captain

A special coffin was ordered here today to bear the remains of Lee Eldred, 68, night captain at state penitentiary, back to New York State.

Eldred was six feet five inches tall and weighed about 240 pounds just before his illness. He had been in prison work most of his life and had worked in number of the largest prisons in the country.

Mr. Eldred succumbed from pneumonia in a local hospital yesterday afternoon, and had been ill but a few days.

He had been at the state prison here for about five years, and was highly regarded by officials and guards there. Among the prisons he had worked in were Sing Sing, Deer Lodge, Montana; South Dakota; prison and Iowa prison.

He had no family here.

New York, Mar. 6.—Oscar Martelliere, slain brother, and Mrs. Paul-ette Saludes, who is on trial charged with the shooting, were described by the defendant's attorney in summing up his case today as a modern David and Bathsheba. The infidelity of the defendant to her husband was admitted, the attorney said, but he thought it excusable as a weakness handed down through the ages. He pictured Martelliere as David, betraying Mrs. Saludes' husband and of making an attempt to destroy him that he might own his wife and her fortune.

LAHR'S Upkeep Cost Insurance

After merchandising over four million dollars worth of Willys-Overland motor cars and after careful analysis of the performance records of the Overland cars on the roads of North Dakota, we make this sweeping offer, WHICH NO ONE BEFORE HAS EVER DARED PUT BEHIND ANY OTHER AUTOMOBILE: We will keep any new Overland car sold by us at retail during March in proper running condition, including labor and parts—excepting only tires, batteries, and speedometers, which are guaranteed by their manufacturers, and damage from wrecks—for an entire year at a cost of

Only 15c a Day

This remarkable plan takes the guess out of automobile upkeep cost

This is the first time in history that you can buy an automobile and know exactly how much it will cost to keep it in proper running condition.

Such a revolutionary measure is made possible only by the sturdy construction of today's extremely low priced Overland and its marvelous record of performance.

No other car in the world equals the economy of the Overland. No other car has ever sold under such an unlimited guarantee.

We have put into operation the flat rate basis for all repairs on our cars, telling the customer just what his bill would be before he authorizes the work. Many other big companies are adopting this plan.
